House Asks Explanation Of Strieff Case Delay

Inquiry Summons Patrolman to Tell Why Action Was Put Off Six Hours

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The House police investigation last night brought its sights to bear on the unsolved murder of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff.

Acting Chairman Hebert summoned Private Edwin Grayson, of the police public relations squad, to tell the subcommittee today why six hours were allowed to elapse between the time Miss Strieff was reported missing and the time the search for her began.

Hebert's action came after the subcommittee launched the second week of its inquiry yesterday by unearthing a fresh batch of testimony discreditable to the police department in general and the detective bureau in particular. The more sensational of the charges were:

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, retired chief of detectives, qualified as a criminal investigator chiefly as a member of the bad check squad and after reaching the grade of lieutenant moved to the top of his profession within the department without taking civil service examinations.

Fearful of Spies

Members of the department fear police spies, regardless of whether, as Maj. Earnest W. Brown, the superintendent, maintains, the fears are baseless, or whether a police "Gestapo" operates for the purpose of informing on fellow officers, as charged by previous witnesses.

Thompson, when chief of detectives, sometimes removed investigators from a case after they had developed vital information and assigned favorites to the investigation.

Lieut. George Darnall, chief of the homicide squad, "doesn't compare," in caliber, with at least three of his subordinates.

Commanding officers have the power of life and death over the careers of subordinates in the Detective Bureau, with authority to send detective sergeants back on a beat "without the stroke of a pen."

During the Thompson era in the detective bureau the pick-up squad, then chiefly responsible for tracking down known criminals when they migrated to the Capital, was given criminal information phoned in by tipsters when that information rightfully belonged to the narcotics squad.

To find job security and to escape petty jealousies, stirred by exhibitions of favoritism, and to obtain regular and shorter hours of work, three ace investigators left the detective bureau and returned to the uniformed division.

Shimon Called to Explain

Hebert described activities of the pick-up squad in taking over cases rightfully belonging to or developed by other detectives, as related by the witnesses, as "muscling-in" and ordered Lieut. Joseph Shimon, former squad chief, to come before the subcommittee today and explain.

Also asked to appear when the subcommittee resumes its inquiry at 10 a. m. today was Capt. Harvey G. Callahan of the First Precinct, who testified last week. Representative Copeland (Republican) of Nebraska, said he wanted to ask Callahan about treatment of colored prisoners. Acting Capt. George Little of the fugitive squad will be a fourth witness.

Meanwhile, Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, dropped into the hopper on the other side of the Capitol a bill to make it the duty of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to maintain an adequate staff to in-

Small Comfort

Government Won't Oust More Tenants

Out of a welter of confusion attending the imminent transformation of the Dupont Circle Hotel into a Federal office building, one thing seemed clear yesterday:

The Government is taking over no more occupied hotels or apartment houses, so great has been the fuss over the Dupont Circle.

As many of the 650 tenants began moving yesterday, or preparing to move—several have defiantly announced they will stick until forced out—a Federal official declared there will be no more of the same.

"Unless the office housing situation becomes considerably worse, no more apartments or apartment hotels will be leased by the Government," said Clay J. Guthridge, chief of planning and space control in the Public Buildings Administration.

His statement was in the nature of comment on a report that the PBA bureau, which leases space for Federal uses, was considering rental of a newly completed apartment house at another downtown circle. Guthridge said flatly that the bureau is "not interested" in the property in question.

The name of Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, was projected into the picture last night when he disclaimed any con-

Boy, 16, Admits Setting 25 Fires In Montgomery

Charred Newspaper Leads to Confession Of Bethesda Youth

Arrest of a 16-year-old Bethesda youth yesterday cleared up all outstanding incendiary fires in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area, Montgomery County Police Chief Andrew M. Newman announced last night. The prisoner admitted setting 25 fires in the past two years Chief Newman said.

The youth was arrested by Sergt. James S. McAuliffe and Policeman Ernest Thompson and John Leahy on the strength of a Harrisburg, Pa., newspaper found beneath the porch of the Brown's Store, Old Georgetown Road and Cedar Lane, Alta Vista, which was set on fire Sunday night.

The fire under the steps of the store was discovered by John L. Imirie, who was driving by and saw the smoke. Imirie pulled the flaming papers and rags from under the steps and summoned the Bethesda Fire Department.

Sergt. McAuliffe and his assistants remembered a youth who had run away from home several weeks ago and probably had passed through Pennsylvania. They found the boy and asked him if he had purchased any newspapers or magazines when he came through Pennsylvania. He said he had bought a Harrisburg newspaper. Confronted with the charred newspaper, the youth broke down and admitted setting the fire, police said.

The prisoner then toured the neighborhood with McAuliffe and the other policeman and pointed out approximately 25 fires he said he had set in the last two years, including two that had not been reported. In the latter two traces of attempts to set fire to a garage and a toolshed were found, but the owners did not know an attempt had been made to fire the buildings. One of the buildings the prisoner admitted firing was his own home, police said.

Drive on Kiev Has Breached Stalin Line, Nazis Hint

By C. Brooks Peters.

Berlin, July 7.—The Reich forces in the Minsk sector north of the Pripet marshes are battling their way along a wide front toward the Dnepr and the upper regions of the Dvina River, according to today's official communique. At the same time, however, informed quarters in Berlin, including the official news agency, assert that the Stalin Line has already been dented "in several places."

Although unanimity of opinion about the extent and depth of these alleged breaks, in the last fortified line which the Russians possess in Europe, is lacking, all German quarters agree that the fighting in this sector is fierce and that the Reich shock troops have broken into the enemy defense zone and taken a number of Russian fortified positions.

Kiev Likely Goal

[A United Press dispatch said the spot where the German spearhead penetrated the mighty defense system guarding the vastness of western Russia was a closely guarded military secret, but it was emphasized that Kiev, capital of the Ukraine and third largest Soviet city, lay directly in the path of the Nazi troops.

[Military and newspaper reports said that the greatest weight of the German attack was aimed at the southern hinge of the Russian line in the area east of Lwow (Lemberg) and Luck.]

The first captured bunker in the Stalin Line was silenced and occupied by shock troops last Friday. On Saturday a strongly fortified Russian position in the same sector was stormed and taken. The Red position is said to have been outfitted with artiller, of the most modern manufacture and to have been defended with such stubbornness that not a single enemy officer and very few men were taken alive.

The German infantrymen worked their way up to the Russian fortification and finally destroyed it with a charge of high-power explosives thrown into an opening in the heavy steel and concrete walls.

Fighting on this front appears to exceed in intensity any since the campaign began. The Germans declare that the Russians realize their predicament will be critical if they are unable to hold the Stalin Line and are throwing their entire weight into its defense. The opinion is expressed in Berlin that no further obstacle in all European Russia will be able to stop the German push.

20 Bunkers Claimed

An official news agency report suggests that 20 modern bunkers in the Stalin Line have already been taken. In this fighting 154 tanks and armored cars and reconnaissance vehicles are reported to have been captured, as well as some 100 cannon of middle or heavy caliber.

Navy Will Ask 150 New Ships Of Congress

$1,700,000,000 Plan Has Roosevelt's General Approval

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

A new warship construction program, which would add some 150 combatant ships to the two-ocean Navy now building, will be sent to Congress soon by the Navy Department.

The new program, which would cost between $1,700,000,000 and $2,000,000,000, has already been discussed informally with Congressional leaders and has the general approval of President Roosevelt. It will go to Capitol Hill as soon as the general board and ranking Navy chiefs agree on the exact distribution of the new ships desired.

To provide the necessary facilities for building the new ships, as well as to speed up the present construction program and provide additional repair facilities, Acting Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal yesterday asked Congress

Invaders Held From Arctic To the Ukraine, Russia Claims

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Tuesday), July 8.—The Red army fought off attacks by German and Finnish troops menacing Leningrad, Russia's second city, while fighting raged unabated as far south as the Ukraine, a Soviet communique reported early today.

The northern battle was in the area of Kakisalmi, only 75 miles north of Leningrad on Lake Ladoga. The Russians said they inflicted great losses on the invaders.

Another German-Finnish attack struck in the Kandalaksha sector in an apparent effort to cut the important railway from Murmansk to Leningrad. Kandalaksha is 140 miles south of Murmansk on the Murmansk-Leningrad railway.

Details Withheld

Despite general fighting on the huge battlefront, Moscow gave only the barest announcement of fighting in certain sectors.

German attempts to cross the Dnepr River in the Bobruisk sector failed, the Russian communique said. In the Mogilev Podolski area the Russians claimed that an entire enemy battalion had been annihilated.

The Germans are still trying to cross the western Dvina River in the Polotsk area, the Russians said, while great battles were developing in the Lepel region.

The Russians gave no indications that their air force had suffered the crushing blows claimed by the Germans and said their planes struck concentrated blows against enemy mechanized units and operated successfully against his airdromes.

Report Panzers Held Up

In the Ostrov area Nazi panzer divisions striking northeast were held up, the Russians said, and in the Novograd-Volynski area stubborn Red fighting delayed apother German mechanized force.

So intense was the fighting, the Soviet announcement said, that near one village the attackers lost 1,300 soldiers in dead and wounded in five hours, but forced the Red troops to withdraw to positions about a mile inside Russian territory. The

From the President's Message:

The Threat and the Action

". . . Forces of the United States Navy have today arrived in Iceland . . .

"The occupation of Iceland by Germany would constitute a serious threat in three dimensions:

"The threat against Greenland and the northern portion of the North American Continent, including the islands which lie off it.

"The threat against all shipping in the North Atlantic.

"The threat against the steady flow of munitions to Britain—which is a matter of broad policy clearly approved by the Congress.

"It is, therefore, imperative that the approaches between the Americas and those strategic outposts (Iceland and others.—Editor's Note), the safety of which this country regards as essential to its national security, and which it must therefore defend, shall remain open and free from all hostile activity or threat thereof.

"As Commander in Chief, I have consequently issued orders to the Navy that all necessary steps be taken to insure the safety of communications in the approaches between Iceland and the United States, as well as on the seas between the United States and all other strategic outposts."

Step Nearer Shooting War, Admiral Says

Landing in Iceland Was Inevitable, Stirling Declares

By Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, Jr., (U. S. N., Retired)
Copyright by United Press

President Roosevelt's action in occupying Iceland with our armed forces has brought us a long step nearer to "shooting war" with Germany and her allies.

Most naval experts, I believe, will agree that it is an inevitable move—made necessary by the steps that went before it, chiefly the President's public announcement that we will deliver supplies to Great Britain by whatever means we may consider necessary.

Our Navy is well prepared to carry out its share of the task. We have ample surface craft and naval airplanes to keep open the sea lanes from the North American Continent to Iceland and apparently began making dispositions necessary for the task some weeks ago.

That the Navy and its Marine Corps will assume the bulk of the burden seems certain. Just how they will do it, of course, is a secret, but any naval student can envisage certain aspects which will be as obvious in Berlin as in Washington.

First, it seems certain, transports will land a large number of Marines who have been especially trained and equipped for just such problems. These units immediately will begin taking over from the British, with whom they probably will be brigaded for a time until they have familiarized themselves with conditions and obtained all the information the British were able to as-

Iceland Move Backed by Most Of Congress

All But Isolationists For Occupation as 'Purely Defensive'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

United States occupation of Iceland was generally accepted in Congress yesterday as a necessary defense measure, though isolationists again challenged the President's foreign course.

Unsurprised by the move, leaders said it forestalls any German foothold on Iceland for a possible thrust at the Western Hemisphere.

A preponderance of members commenting likewise indorsed the swift landing of United States naval forces on the island as insurance against invasion and a guaranty of free seas.

Forewarned at an unpublicized White House conference on Sunday, leaders kept the secret until reading of the message. They called the step "purely defensive" and said there was no reason for a clash if Axis intentions toward this Nation were pacific.

Non-interventionists, again in the minority, challenged this view, questioning the President's authority to move without Congress and the defense nature of the occupation.

Both Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee stressed the defensive character of the strategy and the danger to this hemisphere of an Iceland stepping stone for the Axis.

"Any effort on the part of Germany to get a foothold in Iceland would be aimed at this hemisphere," said Barkley. "This action taken today was a defensive effort to

America to Take All Needed Steps To Guard Ships, Roosevelt Says

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

American naval forces arrived yesterday in Iceland, "watchdog" of the main sea route to Great Britain, to replace its British defenders and to take "all necessary steps"—presumably including shooting—to safeguard sealanes between the United States and the new defense outpost.

This most momentous American move of the war, in open defiance of the German blockade of the North Atlantic, was revealed by President Roosevelt in a special message to Congress that stunned Capitol Hill.

Further, to ward off any Nazi pincers movement against this hemisphere, the President, in effect, instructed the Navy to sweep all hostile warships from the seas between the United States and "all strategic outposts." The order apparently meant that the Navy would clear all German vessels from a wide stretch of blue water from Iceland to British Guiana, from New York to the Azores.

The swift, bold action was frankly planned to keep Germany from moving any farther westward in the Atlantic.

Making good the warning he sounded in his May 27 "fireside" speech, President Roosevelt explained his decision in these words:

"The United States cannot permit the occupation by Germany of strategic outposts in the Atlantic to be used as air or naval bases for eventual attack against the Western Hemisphere."

700 Miles From Britain

The President's order placed American forces well within the German-proclaimed war zone, only 700 miles from the British Isles and on territory that Mr. Roosevelt has never claimed for the Western Hemisphere.

The President said he was acting to "forestall any pincers movement undertaken by Germany" and revealed at the same time that "substantial forces" have been sent to Trinidad and British Guiana, two of the bases acquired from Great Britain last year in trade for 50 destroyers.

American and British officials and members of Congress who interpreted the sensational announcement of the American occupation of Iceland saw in it these meanings:

That the United States, taking on an obligation to relieve and eventually replace British forces there, may have to do some shooting.

That apparently President Roosevelt has embarked on a policy of "getting there fustest with the mostest men"—seizing potential invasion bases before Germany can take them.

Station for Convoys

Further moves of the same kind were expected to occur in the future at the Portuguese-owned Azores and Cape Verde Islands and the French African base of Dakar, all of which lie west of the fifteenth meridian, which touches Iceland on the east.

That the presence of American forces would deter Germany from

Field Employes Who Forego Leave Will Get Pay

An executive order signed by President Roosevelt and made public yesterday will give cash compensation to field employes of the War and Navy Departments, the Coast Guard and the Panama Canal who forego annual leave in the pressure of national defense work.

Affected by the order are some 450,000 workers, including employes of the Washington Navy Yard.

Under the plan employes who would forfeit permanently excess accumulation of leave, due to the fact they are not allowed to carry over more than 60 days from one year to the next, will receive compensation only for the portion of the requested leave that otherwise would be forfeited, the order stated.

The order further states that no employe will lose annual leave if his health necessitates a vacation or "for any exceptionally urgent reason."

Romantic Soldiers Arouse the Ire Of Golfing General

Memphis Tenn., July 7 (AP).—Twelve hundred weary soldiers slept at Municipal Airport here tonight, with the tentative prospect of a hot walk at least part of the 150 miles back to Camp Robinson, Ark., tomorrow—punishment for saluting a group of shorts-clad girl golfers too gaily and at the wrong time.

Riding through Memphis yesterday, the men cut loose with catcalls, yells and whistles as they passed a bevy of pretty girls on a golf course here.

One of them yelled "fore" at a stern-faced man in mufti who was playing the course, and who turned out to be Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, Second Army commander, himself. He ordered the convoy to continue to Camp Robinson, refuel, return here and pass through Memphis in more orderly fashion.

Decision on Milk for Needy Now Largely Up to Wickard

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Washingtonians may learn any day now whether they are in for a milk price increase and whether local participation in the surplus milk programs for needy families is to be enlarged.

Yesterday was the deadline for submitting briefs to the Department of Agriculture arguing for or against the proposed 46 cent per hundredweight increase in the producer price for Class I milk. Public hearings on the question were held two weeks ago.

Upon the decision of Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard hinges not only the future retail price, but also to a certain degree the kind of answer which will be made to requests to inaugurate a 1-cent milk project here for needy school children and expand the nickel quart program to benefit a larger number of impoverished families.

More than a half dozen amendments to the Washington milk marketing order have been asked by dairy farmers and distributors but the producers' application for a price boost is of the greatest public interest. Should the full 46-cent rise (1 cent a quart) be granted, the retail price may go up not 1 but 2 cents per quart, it was implied at the hearings by representatives of dairy companies.

The dairy division of the Surplus Marketing Administration has indicated that it will withhold action on the Washington relief milk pro-

U. S. Man Power Needed to Win, Auchinleck Says

Cairo, July 7 (AP).—Sir Claude Auchinleck, new commander-in-chief of British forces in the middle east, said today United States manpower was needed if the war is to be won properly—"on Germany's own soil."

The new commander said:

"I see as much need for American manpower in this war as in the last. In 12, 14 or 24 months this need will certainly arise. How we are to get into the Germans' country is another matter but ways and means will present themselves."

Iceland Step to Free Large British Force

By Robert P. Post
Copyright by New York Times

London, July 7.—The official announcement that the United States has taken over the defense of Iceland, with its naval forces at first, and would eventually replace the British defenders of that island, was described here as "big news; welcome news." It is regarded as "one of the most important events for some time past."

The British were careful not to say anything about the United States' decision beyond pointing out that it was a step taken to guard the Western Hemisphere and that it underlines the United States' realization that the entire Atlantic is part of its own danger area.

There is, of course, a second aspect to be considered. The British have had a large, well-equipped force in Iceland for well over a year now. Since this step means that eventually the United States will have taken over the complete defense of Iceland it follows that this force will be released for use elsewhere. In other words, as the United States takes over responsibility for this vital post in the west the British will be able to use their troops for equally vital work in the east. With Russia and Germany locked in a conflict British ability to dispose of more and more troops becomes more vital.

Nazi Thrust Long Feared

Furthermore, United States occupation of Iceland brings the United States most close to the European war. Iceland is an important naval base, even a more important base for an air force doing convoy work in the Atlantic, and unless the Germans want war with the United States it would not seem possible that they would dare to attack it now.

Yet, for some time, there have been rumors and fears that the Germans would attack Iceland and perhaps attempt to capture it or at least, bomb it. Now, it would appear the Germans are faced with one of two alternatives. Firstly, they can watch Iceland growing stronger and stronger, becoming a more important base in the Battle of the Atlantic without providing any drain on the British army; or, they can attack Iceland and go to war with the United States. That may be an over-simplification of the situation if it be the fact. But it is the way it is seen from here.

Again there is the indefinite psychological factor that United States and British troops are now ranged side-by-side, even if they are not fighting side-by-side. It is obvious that in the course of taking over Iceland United States troops must become most intimately acquainted with the British soldiers and eventually take over much of their equipment. Huts, barracks and gun-sites erected by the British must eventually come under United States control. The marines and the other troops to follow them will probably bring their own main equipment. But it would appear likely that whatever coast-defense guns the British have mounted will not be moved and before long United States soldiers will be guarding Iceland with British guns.

Air Base Ready-Made

Meanwhile, the British have a ready-made naval air base. It is viewed that the full implication of the landing of United States troops in Iceland can only be seen as a long step toward war; if it is described merely as insurance of the western approaches to North America, then the sentries which the United States has thrown out are coming most close to Europe. It should be remembered that Iceland is west of the point where the searching British cruisers first picked up the Bismarck.

Now that the occupation of Iceland has been announced it is proper to record one fact which has had official Britain worried and puzzled. This is the way in which Senator Wheeler, before the operation had been completed, came out publicly with an announcement that it would be done and even gave the dates when he expected it to be carried out. The British are inclined to thank heaven that Senator Wheeler, like most people dealing with military secrets in the open, had his dates wrong. But in the British view that does not excuse him.

After all, it is argued here, Iceland is within possible bombing distance of the German bases in Norway and is also somewhat vulnerable to a quick hit-and-run sea raid. The British cannot understand how once the movement was decided on anybody could come out in the open and tell the Germans it was under way.

7 More Danish Cargo Vessels Taken by U. S.

The Maritime Commission announced yesterday the requisitioning of seven more Danish cargo vessels, under the Ship Requisition Act, and their assignment to American operators for use in the Pacific trade.

Five of the ships were assigned the American Presidents Line for operation over Far Eastern routes. They were the Gertrude Maersk, the Greta Maersk, the Hulda Maersk and the Marchen Maersk, all seized at Manila; and the Laura Maersk, at Baltimore. The vessels range from 5,038 to 6,599 gross tons.

The Nordvhal, 4,473 tons, and the Nordpol, 4,480 tons, both at Los Angeles, were assigned to the Oceanic Steamship Co., of San Francisco, for operation between Pacific ports and Australia and New Zealand.

Eight Danish vessels previously had been requisitioned.

At the same time Britain announced she was waiving belligerent rights entitling her to refuse to recognize the transfer of "enemy" merchant ships to neutral flags as far as Danish ships recently taken over by the United States are concerned.

The announcement said the government "are now satisfied and gratefully recognize that the uses to which these ships are to be put will contribute, directly or indirectly, to the war effort of the democracies."

In another defense-shipping move, the Senate completed Congressional action on legislation which would authorize the Maritime Commission to fix priorities for shipping.

To obtain preference in use of dock facilities and purchase of fuel, ships would be required to carry cargoes and follow routes designated by the commission.

The commission would be directed to provide first for importation of strategic defense materials.

The President's Day

By International News Service

FALSE FACE: The White House and the President presented a serene, placid face to the world which covered up a morning-long wait for the flash from Iceland that the United States Navy had landed.

AT THE regular 10 a. m. conference, spokesman Steve Early said not much of anything was doing; the appointment schedule offered lean pickings: Senators Wallace White and Lister Hill—British Economist Maynard Keynes, Secretary Morgenthau for lunch.

BUT: Shortly after the President received caller No. 1, Wallace White, Senator from Maine, all hellwuzpoppin. The schedule got shoved around for a fare-thee-well. Ambassador Lord Halifax was added as key man of the Keynes appointment. Secretary of Navy Knox was shoved in ahead of the British. The serenity slipped and White House watchers waited tensely to see what was up—best clue was the absence of the Congressional big four who confer regularly with the President on Monday morning. Early explained the President had talked on the phone with them over the weekend. . . . Therefore . . . word flashed down the Capitol Hill, however, that the big four (Speaker Rayburn, Vice President Wallace, Senator Barkley, Representative McCormack) had met off-the-record with the President Sunday night.

BEDLAM: Shortly after the President and Secretary Morgenthau had finally got around to their lunch, bedlam broke loose in the Executive offices. A paragraph at a time the President's message to Congress re Iceland was handed out to the correspondents who stampeded frantically back and forth between telephone and Early's office. The White House and President had no comment to make on the message—"It speaks for itself," said the spokesmen.

VICTIMS: The Iceland occupation played havoc with schedules. Lord Halifax and Economist Keynes were kept waiting while Secretary Frank Knox and the President huddled behind closed doors, presumably discussed the Iceland move, waited for the flash from the colonel's Navy. Secretary Morgenthau arriving at 12:50 for 1 o'clock luncheon with Mr. Roosevelt, cooled his heels for an hour, finally got in to the oval study, the President and lunch at 2.

The number of British troops on the island is not known, but it has been estimated at from 50,000 to 60,000. If that figure is correct, the replacement will take some time and the last British troops may not be withdrawn from the island for several weeks.

American staff headquarters undoubtedly already have been set up in the Iceland capital, Reykjavik, and normal patrol operations of the vast area of the North Atlantic between Iceland and the North American coast line, intensified.

In addition to the surface patrol, of course, aircraft will be used including long-range bombers.

Task of First Magnitude

The problem will be to prevent German attacks on any of our ships, and possibly on British shipping also, within the area of operations which includes the enormously busy sea lanes from New York, Boston, Halifax and other ports to Iceland and the British Isles.

From the wording of Washington's announcements it would appear that eventually we will take over from the British the bulk of the transport problem between North American ports and Iceland. That will be a task of the first magnitude and will involve the use of scores of ships and thousands of planes, including those which must be based on Iceland for defense of the island in accord with our pledge to the Icelandic government.

That the Germans will permit us to operate ships freely between North American ports and Iceland is, of course, extremely unlikely. Their submarines have made this region a chief hunting ground for months. Hence we must be prepared for the loss of some of our shipping and it should be emphasized that losses may start at any moment.

all-out submarine and air warfare in the Atlantic, unless the Nazis wanted to precipitate American entry into the war.

That Iceland might now become the eastern terminus of a "halfway convoy" system, whereby American forces would shepherd lend-lease shipments to Iceland, where British ships would pick them up for the hazardous dash to England.

The forces were sent to Iceland under an agreement of July 1 between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Herman Jonasson, of Iceland. The President transmitted copies of the correspondence to Congress, along with his message.

Sufficient Planes Promised

The agreement revealed that the United States has agreed to maintain forces in Iceland "strong enough to meet every eventuality" and particularly has assented to keeping sufficient airplanes there which "can be used as soon as decision is made for United States to undertake the defense" of the island.

Indicating that the duties of the American forces would not be confined to land, the President said that as commander in chief he had ordered the Navy "that all necessary steps be taken to insure the safety of communications in the approaches between Iceland and the United States, as well as on the seas between the United States and all other strategic outposts."

Jonasson, apparently at British prompting after conferences with the United States, wrote to President Roosevelt July 1 offering to entrust the defense of Iceland to the United States on eight conditions, which he set forth.

Mr. Roosevelt replied the same day, accepting the offer and the conditions, which required chiefly that Iceland's integrity and independence be respected, that the American forces be withdrawn after the war, and that the forces be large enough to handle any emergency. It was also required that Iceland and the United States exchange diplomatic representatives, a step expected to be taken soon.

Troops to Be Sent

Accepting the offer, the President told Jonasson that "the Government of the United States will send immediately troops to supplement and eventually to replace the British forces now there."

The message to Congress referred only to "forces of the United States Navy," not "troops," but it was presumed that air and land units would follow the Navy to Iceland, if they have not already arrived. The first contingent, it was understood, was composed of bluejackets and marines.

Announcement of the President's move was so sudden that the White House did not even have the usual mimeographed copies of the Presidential message ready for the press before the document was read to Congress.

Great secrecy surrounded the announcement, presumably to make sure that the naval forces reached Iceland before the new defensive action was made public.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, isolationist leader, declared in a statement last week, however, that he had information that American forces were to sail for Iceland July 24 or 25. No Administration official would comment on Wheeler's statement at the time.

Almost as large as Kentucky, Iceland lies athwart the main shipping route often used by British convoys carrying lend-lease goods.

Some of the hottest naval and air action of the current war has taken place near Iceland. The Hood was blown up west of Iceland and the chase of the Bismarck began nearby.

It was presumed he meant sealanes to such bases as Trinidad and British Guiana, but further amplification is expected at his press conference today.

thwart any such move."

George added that the United States naval landing affords needed protection to North Atlantic sea lanes outside the war zones. He noted prior probability of a German thrust out of Norway toward Iceland and Greenland in connection with any attempt to invade Britain.

"If the Axis group has nothing but pacific intentions toward the United States, occupation of Iceland by our marine forces will not occasion any collision between this country and Germany," said George.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, again spearheaded the isolationist criticism. Wheeler told reporters that "if this is a defensive measure it is one thing, but if it is an offensive movement it is quite different." He charged that Secretaries Knox and Stimson "are for entering a shooting war."

"If they get by with this they will move into the Azores and the Cape Verde Islands," he said. "If they get by with that, then into Dakar."

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, said the President was properly occupying "the bridges across the Atlantic" and should hold himself ready to do the same thing in the Azores and Cape Verde "if there is any indication that Hitler is going to take them."

Senator Austin, of Vermont, assistant Republican leader, called the Iceland occupation "the logical step" and its timing was necessarily up to the President. Austin noted that it "was not occupation by force and not outside of the Western Hemisphere.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said that "as presented by the President in his message, a very persuasive case can be made for occupation of Iceland for purely defensive purposes." He said he feared statements by Secretary of Navy Knox made before the occupation "might indicate use of Iceland for totally unacceptable purposes."

Japanese Again Strike Heavily at Chungking

Chungking, China, July 7 (AP).—Scores of buildings were destroyed and hundreds left homeless today when Japanese planes again heavily bombed this city where flags were flying in observance of the fourth anniversary of the Japan-China war.

The moring attack followed last night's raid which left much of the city without water or lighting facilities. Several offices, including that of the Associated Press, were wrecked, but no foreign casualties were reported.

for an additional $585,000,000 for enlarging shipyards, engine factories and ordnance plants.

Forrestal did not mention the new warship building program in his letter to Speaker of the House Rayburn, but other officials said that the proposed outlay was partially to take care of existing construction and repair needs and partially for the expansion contemplated.

The approximately 150 combatant ships included in the expansion plan are considered a one-year program once the Nation's shipbuilding industry gets into high gear. When the vessels could be completed is not yet clear, as they would have to be loaded on top of the existing huge building operations. By expanding facilities, however, it is believed that some of the vessels will be ready ahead of the completion of two-ocean fleet.

While the exact distribution of ships in the new program is not yet settled, it is understood that about 100 of them will be destroyers, a type of craft vitally needed for convoy, patrol and other antisubmarine activity in the Battle of the Atlantic.

No battleships are contemplated in the new program, it is understood, but all other types of combatant ships are included. Should existing proportion of types be generally followed, there might be 4 to 5 aircraft carrier, 10 to 12 cruisers and around 40 submarines.

The Navy now has about 333 warships in service and 359 listed as building. Listed as in service are 15 battleships, 6 aircraft carriers, 37 cruisers, 165 destroyers and 110 submarines. Of the 17 battleships carried as "building," 2, the North Carolina and Washington, have been commissioned, but are not with the Fleet.

Of the remainder building, 12 are aircraft carriers, 54 are cruisers, 199 are destroyers and 110 are submarines.

Forrestal, in his request to the House, said $300,000,000 was desired for additional shipbuilding facilities at naval and private establishments, $125,000,000 for ordnance facilities and $160,000,000 for repair facilities.

"In the past," he said, "the additional facilities authorized in connection with the building program had been confined to the construction or equipping of vessels or portions thereof.

"Because of the great increase in new construction, however, the Navy Department has found it impossible to effect all repairs, alterations and conversions in Government yards, and a very considerable portion of this work has heretofore been placed in private yards.

"This added load, augmented by constantly increasing repair work on commercial vessels, both United States and foreign, is now beyond their capacity, and it is estimated that $160,000,000 will be required to remedy the situation."

Message Due To Ask Change In Draft Law

By Henry N. Dorris
Copyright by New York Times

A message, either from the White House or the War Department, is expected to be sent to Capitol Hill immediately requesting amendments to the Selective Service Act which would permit the retention of trainees beyond their one year of training, and to permit their use in any part of the earth deemed necessary to the defense of the United States.

As a matter of fact, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, is already on record as favoring these amendments, and a considerable number of members of Congress have already urged that the Commander in Chief's hands be untied regarding the use of the armed forces where he deems them essential.

The question became one of the most important in Congress yesterday, in the light of President Roosevelt's message that naval forces of the United States had occupied Iceland.

Another point which made the question paramount was the opportune time for amendment of the Selective Service Act. Today, the House takes up amendments to the Selective Service Act designed to defer men over 28, and to strengthen the provisions of the law regarding labor. The House leadership has assigned two days of debate to this measure, with nothing else on the calendar, thus permitting liberal debate for the remainder of this week.

Stephen Early, secretary to the President, told his press conference yesterday that the Administration has the votes to put these amendments through. When questioned more closely, Early replied that he had assurances through new reports that a majority of both branches favored liberalizing the law to permit free use of trainees. Mr. Early also stated that while there might be a long debate over the question, the Administration was confident of victory in the long run.

A rather fine point is to be made, observers said, over the fact that blue jackets and naval men were the ones sent to occupy Iceland. Navy men are enlisted for six years, Marines for three years. Thus, most of the force (whatever the number) will be available for service there for some time. But National Guardsmen and trainees are "in for only a period of one year unless the law is changed."

Gen. Marshall pointed out last week, however, that the hands of the Army were virtually tied unless the general staff was able to send men to any area considered vital to the defense of this country, and more important, to be able to keep them there for a longer period than a year of training.

Red Propaganda Rife in Germany, Stockholm Hears

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, July 7.—It is reported here that Communist propaganda among the German civilian population and even in the German army has been particularly active since the German-Russian war.

The Gestapo, it is said, is making widespread arrests of suspects and many a Stormtrooper who was a Communist before he joined the Nazi Party, has been dragged into Heinrich Himmler's net.

In Stockholm diplomatic circles it was said today that despite the progress of the German army during the last 15 days, the morale of the German civilian population is lower than it has been since the war started. The publicity given by the German propaganda ministry to Premier Josef Stalin's orders to destroy all crops and stocks behind the retreat has increased anxiety of the Germans about food supplies.

Former German Secret Agent Is Sentenced

Houston, Tex., July 7 (INS).—A slight, dapper man who admits he was once a German secret agent, and claims he once arrested Hitler, was ordered today to serve a two-year term in a United States prison for illegal entry.

Rolf, Baron von Reitzenstein, accompanied by his wife and their son, told Federal Judge James V. Allred:

"I have had my German citizenship taken away. If I am deported to Nazi Germany I shall die."

Reitzenstein told reporters he had arrested Hitler when the Nazi leader staged his unsuccessful "beer hall putsch" at Munich in 1923. Later, he said, he himself was arrested in France for plotting a monarchist uprising in Germany, but escaped to the Netherlands.

At another time, according to his story, he was sentenced to death in Russia, but escaped through the aid of a woman spy who gave him a drug enabling him to feign death.

Board Takes Steps to Keep Cables Open

Listing the cutting of ocean cables, the jamming of radio circuits and sabotage to power supply and equipment as "foreseeable contingencies" that would interrupt international communications, the Defense Communications Board yesterday reported completion of extensive programs to keep communications operating efficiently "through any future emergency."

James Lawrence Fly, DBC chairman, announced:

1. A "careful survey" has been made of cable repair ships, which the DCB has checked to make sure that they will be available for emergency use regardless of where the break occurs. Specifications have also been prepared to convert additional ships to this work.

2. A check of cable supplies has been made, and initial successful experiments have been worked out for substitute insulating materials, to take the place of gutta percha.

3. "Literally hundreds" of interconnections of various cable and radio telegraph routes have been worked out "in order to reestablish through routes without delay" in the event of emergency.

4. Surveys of available material have been made "to insure continuous operation of existing facilities under emergency conditions." Only five potential supply bottlenecks, "none of them serious as yet," have been uncovered.

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Bowling Green, Va., July 7.—One year of military training is not sufficient to make an efficient soldier of the average civilian, Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum told The Post here today.

"Our selectees," said the commanding general of the First Field Army, "have proved themselves willing and enthusiastic. Results of training have been far beyond our expectations.

"But the average drafted man cannot be made into an expert soldier in a year, not with warfare what it is today."

Gen. Drum emphasized that he spoke as a soldier and not as a partisan in any present or future controversy. A bitter fight is brewing in Washington over the War Department's request to Congress that the time for training National Guardsmen and selectees be extended beyond the present one year.

Equipment for the modern Army now building, Gen. Drum said, is "coming along nicely now." The First Army, he said, "will be adequately, if not completely, equipped" when it starts large-scale maneuvers near Fort Bragg, N. C., in October.

He said the A. P. Hill military reservation here would be used to the fullest extent between now and October for field maneuvers of the Twenty-ninth, Twenty-eighth and Forty-fourth Divisions and for tank and antitank units of the Second Army Corps. Tentative schedules for use of the area were outlined by Maj. Gen. Henry C. Pratt, commanding the Second Corps, who accompanied Gen. Drum here from Washington.

Gen. Pratt said the Eighty-eighth Combat Team of the Twenty-ninth, which began moving in today, would use the area until July 18, when it would be followed by the Forty-fourth Division for one week of maneuvers. The Forty-fourth engaged in maneuvers here a month ago when it fought a mimic war against the Sixtieth Combat Team of Fort Bragg, N. C., reinforced by the Third Cavalry of Fort Myer, Va.

After the Forty-fourth leaves, Gen. Pratt said, Corps tank and antitank troops would move in for three weeks of antitank and communications training. Next to use the area, he said, would be the Twenty-eighth Division, for three weeks, followed by the entire Twenty-ninth for three weeks. Interspersed in the schedule, he added, would be "other odds and ends" of troops within the First Army.

Former citizens of the 70,000-acre tract taken over by the Army for training "have appreciated the situation and have handled it with us in a very fine way," Gen. Drum said. "We realize it was quite a shock for them to have to leave their homes for national defense. They all appreciated the need for training if we are to have an effective army."

Paul Mellon Enters Army As Volunteer

Paul Mellon, 34, multimillionaire and son of the late Andrew Mellon, volunteered and was accepted by the Army yesterday at Camp Lee, Va.

"I thought it was the right thing for me, personally, to do," Mellon told the Associated Press after riding from Washington to Richmond by bus with a group of other young men called for induction yesterday.

Under a recent Selective Service ruling, Mellon would have been automatically deferred along with other registrants over 28 when his order number came up.

Asked what his wife, the former Mary Conover Brown, of Kansas City, thought of his volunteering, Mellon replied, "She thinks it's fine."

No Mental Reservations

Mellon also declared that he was not concerned about the length of his service in the event selectees are kept in training for more than a year because when he volunteered as a registrant of Fauquier County, Va., he didn't act "with any mental reservations."

The new soldier's famous Rokeby Stables will be maintained while he is in the Army. Mellon, incidentally, hopes to serve in the Cavalry.

Meanwhile, National Selective Service officials indicated last night that the second National Selective Service lottery to decide in what order 750,000 new registrants shall enter military service probably will be delayed for two or more weeks.

No Need for Hurry

"There isn't as much need for us to hurry as there was last October," said Capt. J. D. Nole. "I guess the lottery will be held in the next few weeks."

There was a 13-day interval between the registration and subsequent lottery last October. If the same timing were used, it would mean that the lottery will be held next Monday, July 14. However, Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, acting director of National Selective Service, has not set any date officially as yet.

The following 94 men are scheduled to be inducted in Richmond today are:

Blondes Deluge Army With Offers of Hair

Long in worries, the War Department took a morning off with the blondes yesterday. The girls besieged it by phone!

All were referred to the Washington Institute of Technology, telephone Warfield 9000. That is where the blonde hair is wanted for use in the meteorological instruments, many of which find way into Weather Bureau, Army and Navy aircraft, becoming a gear in national defense machinery. Only blonde hair works.

"Manufacturers are faced with shortages of such hair," the institute said yesterday. It appeared, too, that if battles depend on weather—as is true to an extent—a couple of squads of blondes could help. A few pounds of their hair will make several thousand weather instruments, the institute disclosed. Blonde hair responds to humidity, reacts to varying temperatures. The brunettes' hair doesn't.

Remember, said the institute: Blonde hair submitted must be 22 inches long or it is useless. American girls in years haven't worn it that long, as have those in the Balkans and the Scandinavian countries. But Hitler has them by the hair. It's up to American blondes to supply the strategic material, even at the pain of becoming old-fashioned long-haired girls.

Smoke Outlawed In Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, July 7 (AP)—City Council today outlawed smoke, traditionally as much a part of this vast industrial center as steel mills and bridges.

Spurred by the complaints of housewives—weary of cleaning smoke and soot grimed houses—council adopted an ordinance requiring fuel users to burn smokeless fuel or obtain mechanical equipment to burn soft coal smokelessly.

The ordinance becomes effective October 1 for all except railroads, riverboats, homes and apartments.

Russians Build Own Prison Camps

By Alvin J. Steinkopf
Associated Press Staff Writer

Przemysl, German-Occupied Poland, July 7.—The prison camp for Russian prisoners in this region is one of the world's fastest-growing communities.

A week ago, it was a Polish meadow. Now, it is covered with 500 acres of low barracks of new lumber.

A few hours ago, the population was slightly more than 5,000. Now, there may be several thousands more because several columns of foot-weary Russians have been moving through clouds of dust in this direction on different highways.

The Germans say they have about 300,000 prisoners, which numerically is a group as large as the population of Louisville.

All along the eastern front prison camps of this type are being organized.

Given Rifle, Sent to Front

I met 18-year-old Achmed Azalam, of Uzbekistan, one of the Soviet republics. He wanted to know whether I was an Englishman, because he had studied English two years.

When the interpreter explained that under present conditions an Englishman would not be paling around with a German major, Achmed said he would try to talk English anyway.

He said he had been in the Russian labor service up to a few weeks ago, when, long before he was scheduled to begin military service, he was given a rifle and sent to the front.

He said he didn't quite know how he was captured. Suddenly, there were Germans all around him, and he just came along.

Each barrack is a now structure accommodating about 60 men. To save on lumber in this region, where it is scarce, each of the head-high buildings is put up over an excavation of about 2 feet.

Prisoners put them together under the directions of Germans who don't know a word of Russian. There is considerable good will on each side, however, and they knock a building together in a few hours.

Prisoners are coming in so fast German administrators have difficulty in recording them. They are registered first by numbers traced with indelibile pencil in figures 2 inches high on the prisoner's chest.

Take Turns in Kitchens

When asked to identify himself, a prisoner opens his shirt. The sergeant then knows immediately whether he came today or yesterday and whether it's his turn to work in the field kitchens.

The kitchens are set up almost entirely of captured Russian equipment.

The ration today was a liter (1.05 quart) of stew made of barley and potatoes and possibly a suspicion of meat.

Drainage, sanitation and water supply are chief problems in choosing prison camp sites. At the camp I inspected, six wells had been sunk in two days. The side hill situation helps drainage.

Keeping 5,000 men orderly in a 500-acre space closed off by an eight-strand barbed wire fence would seem a considerable problem for a few hundred guards. But it's simple because all around are machine gunners on platforms built 15 feet up in the trees. They watch every move in the camp and could make short work of any break for the wheat and flax fields surrounding it.

Germans say prisoners of various types should be segregated, and that just a few days' experience has shown it to be a wise policy. Ukrainians would fight Laplanders, they say, and Mongolians can't get along with Russians.

A special section of the camp has been set aside for Jews. Jews have proved of unusual value in the camp administration because they are the linguists of east Europe, and it is usually possible to find someone in their quarter of the camp who understands any obscure dialect.

The prisoners probably will not stay in the quarters now provided, the Germans said. Those suitable for various occupations may be sent to the Reich or occupied territories under conditions covering all prisoners of war.

At the camp gate as I left was Achmed Agalam, who wanted an English book. The only scrap of English I had was a letter from a New York bank calling attention to eccentricities in the management of my account.

I gave him the letter, and Achmed immediately became an important camp personality because he had a typewritten document. I left him puzzling over the word "overdraft."

Japan Tense As Hirohito, Aides Confer

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, July 7.—While the Japanese nation today observed the fourth anniversary of the outbreak of the "China incident," Emperor Hirohito spent the larger part of the day in conferences with his ministers.

The Emperor first received War Minister Gen. Tiki Tojo who "reported on matters under his jurisdiction" for almost two hours. Thereupon, he received Navy Minister Admiral Koshiro Oikawa, who made a "detailed report on matters under his jurisdiction" for almost an hour. Finally, he received his prime minister, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, who "reported on various affairs of state and answered imperial inquiries "for nearly two hours more."

These audiences, which follow the "momentous decision" on Japanese policy made at the imperial conference last week, are merely one indication of the continued tension prevailing in highest government quarters which, together with the drive started by the ultra-nationalist group calling itself the Council for Launching National Policies, unleashed so many rumors that the police repeated its warning against "loose talk."

The newspaper, Nichi Nichi, attached special importance to a statement made by Gen. Tojo in his anniversary speech. The general said:

"It is high time for the launching of a real national policy for improving the destiny of the nation and executing it with resolution."

This statement, says Nichi Nichi, echoes the sentiments of the 100,000,000 people of the Japanese nation.

Meanwhile, what appears to be the major part of the Japanese fleet suddenly steamed into the harbor of Yokohama and anchored right in front of all the foreign consulates and business establishments without any attempt at secrecy from either Japanese or foreigners. A large part of the fleet's crews got shore leave and participated in the ceremonies of the day, both in Yokohama and in Tokyo.

In line with the wartime emergency, Emperor Hirohito at the imperial family family council today issued new regulations providing that at various court ceremonies full court dress or gala uniforms are to be replaced by simple soldier uniforms or ordinary costumes.

communique did not say where this engagement took place.

In another area 50 out of 300 attacking German tanks pierced the Russian right flank, but the Reds separated them from their accompanying infantry and Soviet tanks annihilated the German tanks. Then the Russian tanks attacked the infantry and the German thrust was repulsed, the Russians said.

Russians said the Germans lost about 7,000 dead and wounded and 1,500 surrendered.

Nearly 1,000,000 Germans have been killed or wounded up to yesterday, S. A. Lozovsky of foreign affairs, declared. He said German casualties had averaged 60,000 daily.

He added he was unable to estimate Russian losses, but that the Soviet Union, with three times the manpower of Germany, was not feeling any lack of troops, despite increasing ferocity of the war.

That manpower, an earlier communique stated, has stabilized the entire front and is busy straightening its lines from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

All along the front, it was said, the Germans held no such great salients as they have been able to make quickly in each of their previous campaigns. They have suffered heavy losses in tanks in futile attempts to thrust a salient northeast from Ostrov, the Soviet communique said.

A stifling heat prevails over all the farflung battlefields.

The communique implied that Hitler's armored arm, the greatest weapon of his offensive, had become so weakened by Russian attrition that wooden and canvas dummy tanks were being used to fill the gaps

Specifically, the Red command reported that Soviet scouts, in an undisclosed area of the front, had discovered that, of a single Nazi tank column of 20 vehicles, only one was of steel. The others, cloth-covered and mounted on caterpillars, were declared to have no weapons save machine guns.

A Soviet observer alleged one of these pseudo tanks "unexpectedly gave in under the pressure of the elbow of an officer who leaned against it."

New successes likewise were reported for the Red navy.

Two German destroyers of a group of warships seeking to penetrate Riga Bay, off Latvia, were reported sunk by a flotilla of Soviet destroyers. It also was said that a German submarine had been sunk in a minefield off the Finnish Gulf.

Vice Commissar Lozovsky promised that the Russians would not permit their foes a breathing spell anywhere. As an example, he said one German motorized division halted for lack of fuel and tried to dig in for a fight from its tank towers, but the Russian infantry hurled gasoline bottles (the celebrated Molotov cocktail) at them and destroyed the tanks.

Lozovsky said, "the war already has become a people's war," referring to creation of people's armies of men from 17 to 55, and declared, "the Germans will be leaving Russia faster than they came."

Here in the Russian capital, the government was giving full aid for the voluntary removal of children to the country. It was stated that there was no mandatory removal, but "many parents wan tto take them away because of the psychological effects of possible bombings."

Wounded men from the front, meanwhile, are being brought to Moscow or taken to points farther east.

Nazis Report Big Battle in Ukraine

advance continue. Skirmishes which developed between dispersed Russian units and the reserve German divisions, moreover, are tenaciously fought, and it may be assumed, costly. But at the same time, with the frontal attack on the Stalin Line the German invasion appears to have entered a new stage. It will be recalled that during the campaign in the west, the Germans began their drive on the Weygand Line while still engaged in cleaning up the Flanders and Artois sectors.

In Bessarabia, meanwhile, allied German and Rumanian units are credited with being on the advance after having repulsed a Russian counterattack. In the Bucovina sector, Rumanian forces are reported to have reached the upper regions of the Dnestr River. To the northwest of these, Rumanian troops and Hungarians are officially stated to have also reached the bank of that river. The citadel of Cernauti has been taken by German and Rumanian troops.

The pressure which has been placed on the Russian position on the Dnestr is said to have aided the advance of Hungarian units which have already, apparently in collaboration with German forces, crossed the Siret River in Galicia. The Hungarian air force is said in informed quarters to have lent its support to the land forces by bombing not only Russian positions, but particluarly the enemy lines of communication.

Attacking Ukraine in Earnest

All of these operations indicate, in the German view, that now finally the southern wing of the advance has gotten into motion and the invasion of the Ukraine earnestly begun.

In the far north, combined German and Finnish forces are said to be achieving their daily objectives according to plan. No geographical locations are mentioned but informed quarters declare that having overcome the initial topographical obstacles, the advance in this sector may now be expected to continue with increasing tempo.

In this sector, assisted by level and dive bombers, the Reich and Finnish forces are reported to be proceeding down the Fischer Peninsula.

The most decisive factor characterizing the eastern campaign at present, it is intimated, is the domination of the air by the German air force. Yesterday another 204 Russian airplanes are reported to have been destroyed, 160 of them in dog fights, 41 on the ground, and three shot down by German minesweepers. Ten German planes are reported "missing."

Rear Lines Bombed

Large numbers of enemy tanks and lorries, as well as artillery batteries, railway trains, munitions dumps and communications arteries were bombed, strafed and destroyed from the sky. In the Ukraine retreating columns of Soviet troops and Red positions were peppered and hammered from the air and similar raids were carried out in the vicinity of Smolensk and east of the Peipus Lakes.

The Russian air force no longer endeavors to fly over the front lines, the Germans report. It remains deep behind its own lines, they say, and endeavors to hinder the German bombers from carrying out their assignments. But that is not easy for them to do, it is pointed out here, since two of the modern German bombers—the JU-88 and the Heinkel 111—are faster than the Russian pursuit planes.

When the invasion began the Russians may numerically have had a larger air force on the eastern front than Germany, authoritative military quarters asserted today. But the quality of the enemy planes was definitely inferior. The Rata 116, as well as the Rata 115 Soviet pursuit plane are both too slow to compete successfully against the newest German bombers, let along the ME-109 and the ME-110 machines, Reich military quarters declare.

British Raids on Continent Soften Nazi Invasion Defenses

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), July 8.—Britain's heavy bombers were blasting again early today at northern France after two daring daylight attacks yesterday.

A competent observer declared these relentless raids had softened Nazi defenses for possible British invasion sorties.

German shipping off the French and Dutch coasts also was attacked yesterday, and soon after midnight great explosions could be heard from the directions of Calais and Boulogne. Heavy antiaircraft fire could be seen in the latter area, but a heavy fog bank obscured vision northward toward Calais.

The British bomb bursts shook the English side of the channel.

German raiders were reported over southern England, where a few bombs were dropped. Some casualties were caused.

The R. A. F. has attacked German communications over a great area at least 750 miles long from Kiel, Germany, to the western tip of France at Brest.

The continuing attacks, this observer said, not only are smoothing the path in case Britain decides to send expeditionary forces, but are destroying facilities Germany would require for an invasion of Britain.

The British air blows, continual since June 11, now are implemented by hundreds of planes daily and by new super-special 4,000-pound bombs of almost unbelievable destructive power.

One of these new bombs can "make a hole like the stairsteps to hell," one pilot said, reporting that everything in the zone of explosion is destroyed.

Buildings adjacent to the blast are leveled to the ground, those farther away are clipped off at the second floors, others more distant at the third floor.

The observer said the bombers were expected to go deeper and deeper into German territory as the nights lengthened and as longer-range fighter escorts became available.

In fact, he said, "the fringe of combat" already has been forced back from the shores, compelling the Germans to move some of their fighter bases inland.

Red, Nazi Armies 'Vanishing'

By the Associated Press

Russian and German claims of casualties they have inflicted on each other are so high that they could obliterate each other's armies within three months at the same rate, leaving only a few generals to shoot at each other.

Russians say they are killing and wounding 60,000 Germans a day—1,000,000 thus far in 16 days of war. This is more than one out of three of the 2,500,000 German troops estimated engaged, a casualty percentage for the whole force far higher than military men say is necessary to destroy morale, and a total of 300,000 more than both the French and Germans lost in the nine-month Battle of Verdun.

The Germans have announced capture of 300,000 Russian prisoners, and stated that casualties inflicted on the Russians were much heavier than that. Russians are estimated to have not more than 3,000,000 soldiers on their western front.

5th Column Feared In Ecuador Clash

Ecuadoreans Accuse Peru of Renewing Bombing, Shelling

Welles Says Dispute Might Open Way To Hostile Intriguers

Guayaquil, Ecuador, July 7.—Peruvian warplanes and artillery, bringing actual warfare to the Western Hemisphere, bombed and shelled frontier towns along the disputed border province of El Oro today in the third day of undeclared war renewing a century-old boundary quarrel, Ecuadorian officials claimed.

The village of Huaquillas was said to have been attacked by Peruvian planes twice during the day while field guns threw shells into the town and other frontier points. Bombs also were reported dropped on the Island of Payana, in the Gulf of Jambeli.

Public excitement was high throughout Ecuador. In Quito, the capital, all stores were closed and 4,000 students marched to the government palace, where President Carlos Arroyo Del Rio addressed them. Messages of support poured in from church and local authorities, pledging support against the Peruvian action.

Report Posts Held

Official sources here claimed that border garrisons were successfully holding out against the attack and denied reports that Peruvian forces had occupied the towns of Chacras, Balsalito, Guabillo, Aguas, Verdes, Quebrada, Seca and Carcabon.

The outbreak upset, at least temporarily, efforts of the United States, Argentina and Brazil to mediate the border dispute. Last May, both Peru and Ecuador accepted offers of the three nations to mediate the quarrel, which has been marked by a long series of battles. The dispute concerns a strip of territory which both countries claim.

Peru Disclaims Responsibility

Lima, Peru, July 7 (INS).—The foreign ministry issued a communique today disclaiming responsibility for clashes between Peruvian and Ecuadorian border forces.

The communique asserted that Ecuadorian troops in the province of Cloro began the disturbances Saturday with simultaneous attacks on the Peruvian outposts of Aguas Verdes, La Palma, Lechugal and Tenam.

"Our frontier posts," the communique announced, "repelled the attacks and gunfire ceased at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. However, Sunday noon the attack was renewed against the Peruvian post at La Palma and we suffered casualties of one dead and three wounded. Sixteen Ecuadorians were killed and others wounded."

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles hinted yesterday that unfriendly outside nations might try to make capital out of the two-day war between Peru and Ecuador.

Expressing deep regret at the armed flare-up of a 100-year-old boundary dispute between the two Latin-American republics, Welles quoted to a press conference an old proverb:

"Very often in muddy waters fishing is good."

Beyond that he would not comment on reports that Nazi agents have had a hand in instigating the hostilities, but he said that the United States and other American republics were anxious to be of service in halting the strife—the only war in this hemisphere.

Welles said that the border fighting was particularly regrettable in view of the international situation, the many peace instruments to which the disputants are parties, and also in view of the offer of Argentina, Brazil and the United States last May to arbitrate the quarrel.

A communication regarding the hostilities has been received from Ecuador, but no word has come from Peru, Welles told his daily press conference.

It was indicated at the State Department that strenuous efforts would be made to bring a quick end to the hostilities.

Newspaper Woman Held in Murder

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. CAROLYN PAYNE, 43, dark-haired business manager of a Bloomington (Ind.) newspaper, pleaded innocent yesterday in the slaying of her one-time sweetheart, Charles O. Mattingly, 41, attorney-examiner for the Indiana Public Service Commission. Mrs. Payne was held without bond on a charge of murder for the September meeting of the grand jury. Mattingly was felled by five pistol bullets, fired through a window screen, as he sat with his 33-year-old wife, whom he married just over a year ago

Aussies Storm Main Defenses Of Beirut

By International News Service

Cairo, July 7.—An assault by Australian troops upon the main defenses of Beirut which may prove the decisive battle of the invasion of Syria was announced in a British communique which at the same time revealed a heavy bombing raid on the Italian city of Palermo, chief seaport of Sicily.

Three big Italian supply ships, loading war materials for the use of the Italo-German forces in North Africa, were struck by heavy high explosive bombs while two others were left in flames and an Italian cruiser swept by machine gun fire.

(A Berlin communique stated that Luftwaffe units heavily bombed the British Egyptian naval base of Alexandria Sunday night while lighter forces dropped bombs on the Suez Canal.)

The R. A. F. also attacked Syrian ports, blasting shipping in Beirut and Ruad Harbors, the airdrome at Aleppo and Vichy French positions along the Damour River.

It was revealed that the Australian advance which finds itself at the main defenses of Beirut had crashed northward several miles since the crossing of the Damour two days ago.

(A Vichy communique acknowledged fighting began at dawn in this area after a heavy artillery barrage by land guns and warships offshore. It also conceded that the strategic northern Syrian stronghold of Deir Ez Zor had been encircled and that light British units were advancing toward Homs, just northeast of Beirut.

British Pilot Dresses as Woman, Flees Nazis

By Godfrey Anderson
English Journalist.

With the R. A. F. on the Western Desert, July 7.—A South African Tomahawk pilot, who fooled German sentries by his disguise as a veiled Arab woman leading a camel, was back with his squadron on the desert today.

Although he tramped 100 miles across the sand in constant danger of discovery by desert patrols, the worst he suffered was blistered feet and a riotous welcome as "the glamour queen of the desert."

The 22-year-old pilot, whose home is in Johannesburg, was shot down by antiaircraft fire while ground-strafing German motor columns, June 18, in Cyrenaica. When his American-made plane crashed in a dried wadi he leaped out unharmed and ran blindly into the desert to escape German patrols rushing to the wreck.

For six days he hid in a deep water hole, sometimes scarcely daring to breathe when the Germans passed within a short distance of the spot where he lay. The seventh day all seemed quiet. With an Arab guide, he crept out disguised as a veiled native woman. Traveling nights, he pushed across the desert, preferring to walk rather than endure the discomfort of a jolting camel's back.

Once the camel nearly betrayed him when it decided to kneel in the middle of a desert track as an Italian truck approached.

"It was a stubborn, disagreeable beast and tried to bite me," he said ruefully.

When his beard grew too thick for a veil to conceal, he changed sex overnight. Came the dawn and the grubby camel driver was hailed from a passing tank. He thought the game was up till a voice cried in English:

"Who the hell are you?"

When he returned to his camp he found he had been posted as missing and all his kit sent back to base. His brother, serving in a South African regiment in a remote part of the desert, has not yet heard the news of his return.

This is the second time this pilot has returned afoot. He walked back into the Sudan from Ethiopia earlier in the war.

"My feet are pretty useful," he says.

He now qualifies for membership in the late-arrivals club of pilots who have returned from the desert, and will wear the emblem of the winged boot.

Brazil to Sell U. S. Its Output of 11 Arms Materials

Rio de Janeiro, July 7 (AP).—The United States has agreed to take all Brazil's production of 11 specified strategic materials for the next two years, it was learned tonight.

The agreement, signed May 14 by United States Ambassador Jefferson Saffery and Brazilian Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha, calls for purchase by the United States of all Brazil's rubber, manganese, industrial diamonds, mica, quartz crystal, rutile (a titanium ore), ferro-nickel, zirconium, bauxite, chrimite and beryl ores.

Exporters reported last month that Brazil had banned exportation of certain important defense materials to any country except the United States.

U. S. Fliers Ferry Planes To Egypt

Reports that American pilots have been ferrying warplanes to British forces in the Middle East by way of Brazil and Western Africa were given implied confirmation yesterday by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles.

Welles was asked about reports that some of the American pilots engaged in the "ferry" work had been jailed by Brazilian authorities. Welles denied the jailing reports emphatically and said that, on the contrary, Brazil had treated the pilots with the utmost courtesy and consideration. He did not deny that the airmen had been engaged in the ferry service.

The Brazil-to-Africa jump is a new leg on a route that the British have been using for months. Since the Middle Eastern theater first flared into activity, imperiling the Mediterranean route, Britain has flown planes and other supplies to Egypt and other points in that area over the heart of "darkest" Africa.

The planes have taken off from a British-owned point in West Africa and have flown over the jungles of Free French Africa to a landing point, usually in Egypt.

The new ferry system disclosed by Welles takes planes from the United States down to Brazil, across the Atlantic at its narrowest point, and then overland to the Middle Eastern area. It was not disclosed whether the planes are flown across the Atlantic stretch or are ferried by ship.

OPM Labor Division Plans Advisory Groups

An OPM labor division spokesman announced yesterday that labor committees, similar to the industry committees authorized by the OPM, would soon be appointed to advise on labor problems of major defense industries.

One of the principal problems, it was understood, is the dislocation that may result from the shift of American industry from civilian to defense production and the shutdown of nondefense plants following priority orders on scarce materials.

U. S. Won't Empty More Apartments

nection with the Dupont Circle's ownership.

Reached by telephone at his Havre de Grace home, he did not deny, however, a report that he inspected the building a month ago.

"My visit had nothing to do with the Government lease," he explained.

Tydings had no further comment.

A few of the tenants of the imposing, 12-story, flatiron-shaped building which overlooks Dupont Circle, still clung to waning hopes yesterday that they will receive an eleventh hour reprieve; that at the last moment their protests against ouster on 10 days notice will be heeded and the deal stopped. On Saturday they were "requested" to be out by July 15.

Probably in an even worse plight were the merchants occupying the ground floor, who are still in suspense. Those interviewed by a Post reporter said they had not been notified whether they may remain or must go. "If you find out anything, please tell me," came plaintively from W. A. Helphenstine, proprietor of the building's jewelry and watch repair shop.

"My clerks want to know whether they should look for other jobs," said Dr. Harry R. Kenner, druggist. "I don't know what to tell them, any more than I know whether I should replenish my stocks."

Arthur Seagren, liquor store proprietor, was equally in the dark. His shop, as well as one or two others in the building, was extensively remodeled recently.

Meantime, Government officials revealed that the building at 515 Twenty-second Street Northwest which started out to be an apartment house, only to be leased by the Government soon after ground was broken, is virtually completed and will be occupied before the end of this month.

vestigate and prevent in the District the crimes of treason, murder, rape, kidnaping, arson and manslaughter.

Specifically citing the slaying of Miss Strieff, a War Department clerk from Des Moines, Senator Herring declared the bill was the direct result of "continuous and repeated crimes of murder in Washington for which no solution has been found."

Cites G-Men's Successes

The measure was referred to the Judiciary Committee and Senator Herring said he would ask Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, for an early hearing. Herring pinted out that the bill does not relieve local authorities of any of their responsibilities and declared:

"The FBI was turned loose on public enemies and kidnapers and they wiped them out. They should be given the same opportunity in Washington."

Lieut. Robert J. Barrett, a veteran of 16 years on the Metropolitan Police Department and the ace investigator who was credited by Maj. Brown last week with breaking the "sniper" murders, was the chief witness yesterday against Thompson and the detective bureau.

Barrett, after a long session on the stand, was called back by Representative Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and asked if he thought the detective bureau, under Thompson, "has been a good bureau."

"I testified before that the bureau is not as efficient as it should be," Barrett replied.

"Then we are all agreed," said Sauthoff. "The record speaks for itself. What kind of training did Thompson have?"

"No Real Experience"

He was on the check squad, Barrett answered, and assigned there until he was made a lieutenant in the uniformed division and a short time later was put in charge of the detective bureau.

"Therefore Thompson had no real investigative experience," said Sauthoff. "Any improvement under Keck (Acting Chief of Detectives Ira Keck)?"

"I would rather deal with Keck. At least he will talk to you and treat you with courtesy."

"Couldn't you go see Thompson?"

"Thompson is a peculiar man. He's a hard man to get along with."

Hebert broke in to ask if Thompson became acting captain and, eventually, chief of detectives, by virtue of having passed a civil service examination.

"No," Barrett replied. "Civil service had nothing to do with it."

"Who put Thompson in charge of the bureau" asked Hebert.

"I imagine the Major," Barrett replied, explaining that civil service is not necessary above the rank of captain.

Under questioning, Barrett then disclosed that Thompson and Capt. Keck were partners on the check squad, that he believed Keck to be about "90 per cent better than Thompson," that he agreed with Hebert that civil service exemptions are "what's wrong with the Police Department."

"In other words," said Hebert, "the Civil Service is the cloak behind which some people hide . . . If you were writing a book on how to become chief of detectives, you would say that the first thing is to get on the check squad?"

"I am not going to write a book," came Barrett's reply.

Barrett had been on the stand only a short while before he named the next witness, Sergt. Robert Murray, of the Sixth Precinct, described as a promising investigator, as a victim of Thompson's favoritism. He recalled that Murray waited for ten weeks on a "plant" in a Northwest Washington store before two members of a bandit gang were shot down.

Told to "Lay Low"

Thompson, Barrett said, instructed Murray to "lay low" after he had sprung the bandit trap and the case then was assigned to other detectives, though Murray was certain he knew who the men were. Barrett said Murray came to him and asked him what he should do because Murray was worried when some time passed without capture of the men.

"There were certain men Thompson wanted to see advanced ahead of others and Thompson would pass on to them the information other men were getting," Barrett said.

Barrett cited an experience of his own with Thompson. In 1935, he recalled, panderers and prostitutes had "taken over" the city and the pick-up squad cleaned them out. Barrett said he learned the gang had taken up headquarters at North Beach, Md., and arranged with Maryland State police for a raid.

Barrett said he went to Thompson with the information, but was advised not to "get mixed up in politics." The next morning, Barrett declared, he met Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass who told him Thompson had assigned Brass to go to North Beach. "Brass went down and got nothing," said Barrett.

Police rivalry, Barrett stated, extends throughout the department where uniformed men are sometimes denied credit for making important arrests.

Asked how many are sent to the scene of a crime, Barrett first said 7, then 9, and, finally, 11, remarking:

"I'd better stop talking."

"You're sure that's the limit," said Herbert. "That's a natural number so let's stop there."

"I'll stop there."

They Favor No. 1

Barrett replied "some do and some don't," when asked by Hebert if men assigned to an investigation are inclined to keep what information they obtain to themselves with the intention of promoting their own advancement.

With the Detective Bureau reorganized and all detectives responsible to one chief, Barrett said he believes results would be "twice as good." He called the present setup of precinct detectives and headquarters detectives "poor administration," explaining that in some investigations precinct captains and the chief of detectives "have different ideas."

Hebert asked Barrett if he still felt free to make underworld contacts. He replied:

"Things are kind of warm. If they see you making contacts now you are apt to get reported."

Hebert wanted to know if a "Gestapo" is responsible for this attitude and Barrett stated:

"There's something operating. I don't know what you would call it."

"You still make that statement in the face of the testimony of Maj. Brown?"

"I'd rather not answer that statement.

"Because you do not want to answer in the affirmative?"

A Change of Methods

"Yes, sir."

When the department was in the District Building, Barrett related, gamblers used to wait outside to give information to detectives and once, during roll call, a detective was called outside by one of them and returned later with a collection of sawed-off shotguns belonging to a notorious gang. The "mobs" didn't have a chance in those days, Barrett testified, and when asked if he would make similar underworld connections today, said:

"I wouldn't talk to gamblers today."

"You mean you are afraid that you would be reported by spies?"

"Spies, or pimps, or something like that."

"Are superior officers lending a willing ear to those reports?"

"That's right."

Barrett told the subcommittee that if a long list of gambling arrests, submitted last week by Hartman, indicated that the prisoners were released on $5 and $25 collateral, the men were not charged with gambling but with disorderly conduct.

"This committee was shown a list purported to contain the names of gamblers," Hebert stated. "This committee has been misled."

Inspector Edward J. Kelly and another police officer, both no longer in the detective bureau, are the best men on the force at detecting pickpockets, Barrett said, and Hebert asked if that meant that "under your present system you've lost your best pickpocket men?"

"Not My System"

"It's not my system," was the reply. "Don't call it mine."

The three outstanding men on Lieut. Darnall's homicide squad, Barrett stated, are Detective Sergts. Jeremiah Flaherty, Aubrey Tolson and John Wise. Hebert brought up the question of an intra-departmental spy system again and Barrett, replying—"I know what you are getting at"—said one of Hartman's men was assigned to Barrett's precinct, No. 3, where he was called the "bogey man."

"I had to rescue him because I knew there was nothing wrong with that man," Barrett stated.

The officer in this case, Barrett said, he formerly knew as a hotel bellhop and when he caw him at the Precinct Station he was carrying a list of stolen cars. Barrett said he asked the man what he was doing and was told he was now working as an auto salesman.

"There appears to be a lack of head or tail to this department," observed Sauthoff, inquiring if all men assigned to an investigation hold a regular progress-report conference with their superiors.

"No," was the reply.

"It's a kind of catch-as-catch-can proposition."

"Yes, that's right."

"I don't see how any of you can tell what's going on."

Barrett agreed and stated he thought there should have been such a conference on the Strieff case, particularly with the commanding officer of the precinct where the body was found.

Regardless of how long he works, Barrett declared, a detective is required to carry through on a crime investigation because there is no one "to take up where he leaves off." Hebert, referring to information given him on the Strieff case, told Barrett he was informed by Stanley Le Blanc, Miss Strieff's fiance, that Private Grayson told Le Blanc it was a police rule to wait six hours before starting investigation of a missing person case.

"Every minute you lose on a case like that is important," Barrett remarked.

Barrett recommended permanent ranks for detective sergeants and others in the detective bureau.

"Overnight, for no reason at all, a man can be demoted and that is what the men are afraid of," he said.

Don't Touch the Pets

"Suppose you go tough with one of the pets," asked Sauthoff, "could you be demoted?"

"That could happen."

"Hitler hasn't anything better than that, has he?"

During his testimony, Barrett pointed out former Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke, now repropostion?"

encouraged his men with a pat on the back. He contrasted Burke with Thompson.

Hebert assured Barrett that there would be no "reprisals" for his testimony, addding: "We are not trying to get anybody and we are not trying to drive anybody into retirement. Our only purpose is to get Washington the very best police force possible."

A similar assurance was given Sergt. Murray whose answers were chiefly noncommittal.

"Your attitude is magnanimous," said Hebert. "There will be no reprisals or anything of that sort here, and I don't want you to go home and have a dream tonight and dream about things you don't have the courage to tell us now."

Murray said he left the Detective Bureau because that he felt insecure and testified that while, on paper, his salary now is $250 a year less than it was, actually he is ahead because he doesn't have to use his own car, buy gas for it and pay for meals away from home. Further-

Rich, Red, Blood!
THAT'S WHAT BUILDS NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY FOR TIRED-OUT SICKLY FOLKS
. . and here's the way Doctors and Clinics PROVE You Can Have It!

Rich, strong, nourishing blood cells eliminate poison, promote health.

Don't fool around gambling with your health if pale, thin, wishy-washy blood is keeping you rundown, tired-out, sick and ailing. Only good rich blood can build strength and energy, repair the damage done by sickness and disease, and nourish you through to rugged, husky strength, vigorous energy and that wonderful condition which folks call "feeling swell". Good blood is the most vital essential to health there is. That's because each one of the millions of red blood cells which circulate to every tiny part of your whole body provide the only way you can get life-giving oxygen and nourishing body-building materials to every tissue. Each day, millions of body cells are built and broken down with the aid of the blood stream. The refuse and poison of these destroyed cells is oxidized and disposed of through the lungs as carbon dioxide.

Obviously, when blood is weak, pale, thin and watery, it is lacking in enough iron and oxygen and other life-giving factors to do its work. Body cells are destroyed faster than they are repaired. You become run-down, weak, and encourage the development of serious disease.

What Makes Rich, Red Blood

Doctors will tell you, nourishing blood is composed of protein, fats, carbohydrates, mineral salts, water, vitamins, iron, and a red blood-making factor found most abundantly in raw liver. Your everyday food provides many of these substances, but is most often deficient in the last three. After years and years of research, a way has at last been found to combine these precious elements in assimilable form in pleasant-tasting tablets called Boncquet Tablets. These easy-to-take tablets combine the active principles of raw liver, vegetable iron (such as you get in raw spinach), Vitamin B complex, Vitamin G, and assimilable calcium and phosphorus. Doctors and clinics who have used Boncquet Tablets and scientifically tested them with actual blood counts and hemoglobin percentages, have been amazed at the tremendous improvement almost invariably made in the patient.

If you are feeling tired-out, rundown, if you are constantly getting sick and never feel really well, by all means try Boncquet Tablets today. They are not expensive to take and you are absolutely guaranteed that Boncquet Tablets will improve your blood, make you feel better, stronger, and have more energy, in 9 days or every penny of your money will be refunded. (1/9 of your blood, you know, is completely remade every 9 days.) Try Boncquet Tablets today.

Introductory size 150 Boncquet tablets enough for two weeks $2.00. Large Economy size 400 tablets $4.00.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 14 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

NOW IT'S UP TO YOU,

MR. CONGRESSMAN:—

On May 27 the President clearly defined the danger which confronts us. He told us what we must do—clear the Atlantic and secure the bases from which Hitler might attack this hemisphere. He said that we must maintain the freedom of the seas and take whatever measures are necessary to get our supplies to Britain.

But you did nothing.

On June 21 Hitler attacked Russia, and by turning his back upon the west, gave us an opportunity for which no one had dared to hope.

And still you sat and listened to the ostrich isolationist minority.

Yesterday, on July 7, the President announced his first bold, decisive action—the sort of action we have been hoping for since May 27—the sort of action we have been expecting any moment since Hitler gave us our great opportunity.

Now it is up to you, Mr. Congressman, to give the President an unequivocal vote of confidence.

You have the facts. You have been given leadership. You have your constitutional duty to assume your share of the responsibility.

If you are waiting for a mandate from us, the people back home—you have it.

Hitler's dupes and stooges have had their day in court. Most of you who represent us, the majority, have been silent too long.

If you are behind the President, as we are—as we know you are—
THEN DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT—NOW.

WE'VE GOT TO FIGHT THIS WAR.

We can't win it by talking about it.

3 Detectives Have a Total Of 59 Citations

When Lieut. Robert Barrett told the House committee investigating the Police Department of the splendid work of three ace homicide detectives he substantiated very much their police records.

The three detectives, all assigned to Lieut. George A. Darnall's homicide squad, are Jeremiah F. Flaherty, John W. Wise and Aubrey M. Tolson. The three have a total of 59 commendations to their credit.

Detective Sergt. Flaherty, who was born December 30, 1892, was appointed to the police force July 22, 1922. He was made a precinct detective on July 1, 1927, and a detective sergeant June 16, 1930. He holds 19 commendations, including 5 for solution of murders. He also worked on the sniper killings and aided in bringing the sniper to justice.

Detective Sergt. Tolson, 42, was appointed on July 1, 1925. Five years later he was named a precinct detective at No. 7. On January 1, 1932, he was made a detective sergeant. He was the first to suspect a crime in the drowning of two Washington women, Mary Clayton Wimbley and Wilma Taylor, in the canal. His work brought the two companions of the women to justice. He also arrested the man who murdered a U. S. Park policeman on First Street Northwest. Detective Tolson holds 19 commendations.

Detective Sergt. Wise was born on January 29, 1894. He was appointed to the force February 1, 1925. One month after his appointment he received a high commendation for arresting a murderer. Two years later he was made a detective sergeant. He hold 20 commandations and is respected as one of the homicide's best men by other members of the force.

Lieut. Darnall was appointed to the force on June 16, 1917. Two years later, due to his work in connection with the solution of several murders, he was made a precinct detective. On July 1, 1921, he was made a detective sergeant. He now holds the title of acting lieutenant and heads the homicide squad. He has solved 5 murders and holds commendations on 13 accounts.

Capt. George M. Little, who will testify today, was born on August 27, 1879. He was made a private August 10, 1907. He was promoted to a sergeant on September 16, 1925, and a lieutenant May 1, 1932. He holds 22 commendations for solution of murders, robberies and for his presentation of cases in the police courts. On December 1, 1936, he was designated an acting captain and on October 16, 1939, was placed in charge of one of the three detective districts.

Detective Sergt. Joseph W. Shimon, attached to the district attorney's office, was born August 24, 1906. He was appointed to the force May 17, 1929, and pounded a beat at No. 3 when Inspector James Beckett was the commander of the precinct. On January 1, 1932, Shimon was made a precinct detective and on October 1, 1933, was promoted to detective sergeant at the Detective Bureau. On March 8, 1938, he was designated as an acting lieutenant. He holds 14 commendations.

Pvt. Edwin S. Grayson, of the Public Relations Squad of the Metropolitan Police Department, who was summoned to explain why six hours elapsed between the time Miss Jessie Elizabeth Strieff was reported missing and the search for her was begun, was born on Christmas Day, 1901. He was appointed to the force September 4, 1930, as a patrolman in the First Precinct. Five years later, he was named one of five investigators to the Public Relations Squad, which investigates and keeps a record of missing persons. The bureau handles approximately 3,000 cases annually.

Police Seek Five Missing D. C. Persons

Five Washingtonians are being sought by police after they were reported missing from their homes yesterday.

Mrs. Phillips

Mrs. Mildred Phillips Leonard, 28, of 1005 Twenty-third Street Northwest, has been missing from her home since last Wednesday. Her brother, William L. Phillips, with whom she lived, said that she left their apartment while he was away. She left no note and took no luggage with her and he fears she may have met with foul play. Mrs. Leonard is 5-feet 5-inches tall and weighs about 140 pounds. She has light brown hair and brown eyes.

Police also were asked to search for Hazel Frazier, 13, of 510 Second Street Northwest, who has been missing since early yesterday. The girl's mother, Mrs. Catherine Frazier, said her daughter left with another girl for Hampton, Va., and has not been heard from since.

Mrs. Caroline Pillar, 28, of 1608 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, left her home last Saturday to visit friends in the 1600 block L Street Northwest. Her husband, Robert Pillar, told police that she failed to arrive there.

Police are questioning a 21-year-old colored man about the disappearance of Bessie May Jaines, 18, 1112 Tenth Street Northwest. The girl's mother, Mrs. Clara L. Hamilton, said the girl went to Baltimore with a man yesterday and did not return with him.

Richard Teachout, 16, of 4410 Volta Place Northwest, also has been missing from his home since last Sunday night. His father, Dr. Robert B. Teachout, asked police to look for him.

Don't Become Police, Brown Tells His Boys

There was a gang of kids who went away to summer camp at the Police Boys Club reservation at Scotland Beach, Md., and there they grew homesick although they didn't like to admit it.

They were talking over this business of feeling homesick in their tent when a big, elderly man came in and sat down. He pointed out to them that getting over feeling homesick was part of the burden of becoming men. They admitted they wanted to be men, so they went out for a swim together, and strangely, they forgot their homesickness because they were determined to be men.

Now this happened two years ago, but the memory of boys who would be men is long.

The memory of one of these boys, Ralph Cantwell, 11, of 628 M Street Northwest, is particularly long.

The other day he was studying over the newspaper, and he read that the man who had come into his tent two years ago might retire from his job.

That man was Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

As best Ralph could figure out, there were some people who thought the major ought to step down. He didn't like that. Because he knew more about the major than some people.

So he got some of the gang together, and they got more boys who had known the Major at Scotland Beach, and they all went to Police Headquarters yesterday.

"Please tell us you won't do it," said Ralph as spokesman for the group.

The Major said he'd have to think it over. But no matter what happens he wants them to know he'll continue to be their friend, he said.

He talked about this business of growing up, and he said he'd like to see them as doctors and lawyers, and maybe newspapermen. But not policemen. That's what he said.

House Asks Explanation of Delay in Strieff Case

more, he pointed out the uniform division hours are shorter.

Murray said he prefers detective work and would return to the bureau "if there was any inducement." Typical of the questioning of Murray is the following:

"Have you heard of a Gestapo?"

"Only since these hearings."

"Well, call it what you will; call it an Ogpu, if you like. Have you ever heard of Police Department spies."

"Yes, the first time I heard of spies was when two policemen were brought up on charges in connection with some gambling downtown several years ago. I haven't heard anything since."

"Is the Detective Bureau efficient?" asked Sauthoff.

"I wasn't in the bureau long enough to know."

"Let's not have excuses or evasions."

"We have some outstanding men."

"In your opinion, is the Detective Bureau efficient?"

"I was not down there long enough to tell."

"All right! You don't want to answer."

McCarty also was asked why he left the Detective Bureau. A sergeant now in the Second Precinct, McCarty answered:

"I didn't lose anything. I didn't have to use my own car and I could eat at home. I've been gaining weight ever since."

It was McCarty who told the subcommittee about Thompson's practice of shifting assignments after one squad had started to work on a case. McCarty said the narcotics squad, of which he was a member, was the victim of the practice and the pick-up squad the beneficiary. The practice, he said, created "jealousies and ill-feeling" and that "all squads kicked against it." Here's the way his testimony ran when Hebert asked the witness if he had heard of Gestapo rumors.

"I've heard of the special investigation squad, but never knew members of the squad other than Capt. Hartman."

"Did you ever hear that theiy spied on fellow officers?"

"Only in that one case."

"Have you ever heard of intra-departmental tale-bearing?"

"All members of the department are afraid to talk with gamblers and prostitutes."

"Isn't it necessary for a good policeman to have underworld contacts?"

"A good policeman must have them."

Informers Essential

McCarty objected to Hebert's use of "stool pigeon" at this point, so Hebert asked if it would be possible for a policeman to be efficient without informers.

"You have to have them," was the reply. "Every man in the uniformed division, but particularly the plain-clothesmen, is now afraid to make those contacts. When Burke was inspector he told his men not to bother about the special squad and to maintain their contacts."

Sauthoff's questioning of McCarty brought out the officer's opinion that the District vagrancy law should be strengthened, that the District has no habitual criminal law and that the existing statutes covering concealed weapons permit a man to carry an open knife so long as a part of the blade is exposed.

"There's a job for us," said Sauthoff. "We ought to get some laws that would help out the police department."

McCarty praised the detective school formerly conducted by Inspector Edward J. Kelly, whom he described as "a man that every precinct detective tries to live up to." He would rather not be in the Detective Bureau under present circumstances, McCarty said.

Barrett had told the subcommittee earlier that he would rather be where he is, in the uniformed division, "than be down there (the Detective Bureau) on a captain's pay."

Called back to the witness chair a third time, Barrett handed the subcommittee a list covering all the times the Third Precinct has been called upon to supply men for private functions. From January 1 to June 1, 1941, the list showed, there were 397 such details, for which the Third Precinct, from an available force of 79 men, supplied 582 policemen in groups of from one or more. From outside the precinct, 554 men were assigned to these details, Barrett demonstrated.

Inspector Thompson has been spending most of his time at his summer cottage near Leonardtown, Md., since he began his leave of absence May 19. He could not be communicated with last night, as he has no telephone. His leave expires July 31 and he is slated for retirement August 1.

Treasury Employe Dies From Gas In Apartment

Mrs. Pauline Bayles Merrick, 49, 3701 Sixteenth Street Northwest, was found dead in her gas-filled apartment last night. She was lying on the kitchen floor with a note beside her. Four burners were open on the gas range and the windows and door shut tight. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Mrs. Merrick was found when her aged mother, returning to the apartment, became alarmed when she was unable to get in. She notified neighbors who obtained a pass key from the desk downstairs.

Mrs. Merrick was an employe of the Treasury Department.

YOUR FAMILY at The Homestead

It's not by chance that so many outstanding families, year after year, select The Homestead for their vacation. It's because they've learned that The Homestead gives them more recreation, more relaxation, than they've found elsewhere.

This Summer is an especially good time for your family to make the acquaintance of this 17,000-acre mountain estate in the Virginia Alleghanies. We're having a "big season"; our superb facilities for golf, riding, tennis, skeet, and other sports are at their finest—and our lower Summer rates are now in effect.

Let us know your vacation dates, your sports interests, and the number in your family, giving ages of the children. By return mail we'll send you complete information and costs.

Because The Homestead's elevation is 2,500 feet, the temperature is 10 to 15 degrees cooler than in the cities—a difference you'll appreciate.

New England States Offer Example in Patriotism

Celebrated in First March of Time 'Regional'; Cross Roads Snaps Back With a Comedy; Items of News and Gossip of Amusements

IT IS WHOLLY NATURAL that New England should be in the van of all the States bending their efforts toward the fulfillment of the defense program mapped to meet the national emergency proclaimed by President Roosevelt. As one of the Republic's first cradles of liberty—Lexington, Concord, Bunker Hill—the "Yankees" of our easternmost seaboard have consistently been "minute men." That is especially true now, when their beloved terrain lies nearest the belligerent zone of the North Atlantic. They had a taste of the German submarine threat in the First World War and do not intend to be caught napping this time.

GEORGE BRENT

How the six populous and industrial States of New England have mobilized for preparedness will be depicted in the next issue of the March of Time, under the title of "New England's Eight Million Yankees." This film will be the first of a series of "regional" documentaries that will include Texas, the Midwest and other sections of the United States as time goes on. It will show the New England Yankees in action, serving as volunteer airplane spotters, working on defense construction in shipyards and factories and buying defense bonds and saving stamps.

Typical of the 100 per cent American community is the little town of Exeter, N. H., where today every citizen is keenly aware of his responsibility to his country and is doing something about it. In a special sequence incorporated in the film, the March of Time will show how Exeter's people are shaping their life and work to meet the needs of national defense.

Here should be a fine example for all the rest of the country and an item of no comfort whatever to the blood-dripping totalitarians.

This may be a little out of our line, but we still are willing to do a little drum-beating for the drum-beaters. Floyd L. Sparks formerly director of Cue and Curtain, at G. W. U., has been put in charge of the entertainment features to be sprung on the public during the impending season of the Redskins' pigskinning on the gridiron. Mr. Sparks' immediate concern is drum majors—or a drum major. So the Washington Redskins Football Band will hold open competition at an early date for the purpose of selecting an ace strutter for the coming year. All he needs is "general ability, knowledge of marching commands, baton handling and the appearance of an athletic Adonis." Sounds easy. Apply to Mr. Sparks in writing at 739 Ninth Street Northwest.

They Say It's "Fair Play"

Quaint people, these Terrell's. Daniel of that name, in charge of advertising and publicity for the loewcal Loew interests, now soaking up the bright rainshine at Bethany Beach, Del., on his "two-weeks-with-pay," thought up a weird and risky one. Having been wheedled into writing "guest columns" for some of the boys and girls of the press, the Terrellble Terrell craftily turned the tables about by dumping a chore on each of the drama desks for performance during his absence. Ours is to peddle a batch of envelopes not later than today. Okay, you other galley slaves, they ought to reach you by Friday at the latest—for Wednesday release!

Miss Sally Stroud, that incorrigible Arkansas hill-wilhelmina, must have taken a good look during the period of her valued service as a motion-picture reviewer for this department. Comes a pretty vacation postagecard from Clifton Forge, Va., bearing this insulting legend: "The scenery is here, wish you were beautiful!"

Made-to-Order for Summer

Beginning tonight, the Cross Roads Theater, over ferninst Bailey's Cross Roads, in Virginia, should be right back in the breezy pace of its first week—if it ever has receded from it more than one night since. The third bill in the Old Dominion haymow, opening tonight, is "Good-Bye Again," that sprightly comedy of a traveling lecturer who ran into an old romance in the town of his alma mater, out in Ohio. The late Osgood Perkins played it with high success at the National a few seasons ago and more recently it was filmed under the disguising title of "Honeymoon for Three," with George Brent, Ann Sheridan and Charlie Ruggles. Reginald Allen and Forney Reese head one of the Cross Roads' superelegant casts.

That batch of ne plus ultra comedy featurettes known as the "Chaplin Film Festival" will be barging along into its third capacity week at the Little Theater practically by the time you see this. Balancing the Chaplin antics is that inspiring and timely subject, "The Flag Speaks."

Cloudy-With-Intermittent-Showers Note

An English Beauty Strikes a Stunning Pose

HEATHER ANGEL,

recently in the news, even more recently was before the cameras in "Before the Fact." This is a new Alfred Hitchcock production, costarring Cary Grant and Joan Fontaine, and, presumably, will be coming along to a local screen in due time. In the meantime, this photographic study is sufficient evidence that Miss Angel is worth waiting for

Gene Tierney Steps Out as Glamour Girl

By Alexander Kahn

Hollywood, July 7 (U.P.).—Gene Tierney stepped out of her petticoats today and, like the butterfly emerging from the cocoon, revealed that her charms had been hidden too long.

For more than a year and through four pictures, Miss Tierney has been enveloped in billy underskirts. Walter Wanger, who delights in borrowing players from other studios and turning them into stars, borrowed Miss Tierney from Twentieth Century-Fox, which had her in petticoats so long, and cast her as the exotic half-caste girl in his new African film, "Sundown."

After having seen the little actress in "The Return of Frank James," "Hudson's Bay," "Tobacco Road" and the yet to be released "Belle Starr," even Hollywood would not recognize her as the same person today when she appeared on the Wanger sound stage clad in an Arabian sari.

Now a Glamour Girl

"Yes, I'm the same Gene Tierney," the blue-eyed, 20-year-old actress laughed as we entered her dressing room on the stage. "But now I'm a glamour girl. How do you like it?"

We liked it fine.

"I was almost 'typed' as a petticoat girl since I've come to Hollywood, but I think I'll get away from the class in this picture," she said, looking down at herself.

"It's funny how I got this part. A few months ago I attended a social function and I wore a semi-Arabian costume. One of the guests at the party was Mr. Wanger and during the evening he commented that I'd make a perfect Arabian girl. I thought his remark flattering but didn't give it any further thought.

"A few days later I received a call from Lou Schreiber, casting director for Twentieth Century-Fox and he told me that Mr. Wanger wanted to borrow me for the starring role in his new picture. My own studio didn't have a role ready for me and if I was willing they would loan me to Mr. Wanger for a picture."

After reading the Barre Lyndon story, which ran serially in a national magazine some months ago, Miss Tierney jumped at the opportunity to play the character of Zia.

LEONARD LYONS

And One Was Smart!

New York, July 7.

William Tudor Gardiner, the former Governor of Maine, who now is an official of the National Committee of Investment Companies, tells this story of the time he occupied the Executive Mansion: A man arrived at his office and asked: "Whatever became of the law firm of Nelson, Andrews & Gardiner?" . . . "Nelson," replied Gardiner, "is in Washington. He was elected to Congress, Andrews died. And I'm Governor of Maine." . . . The other man hesitated, in contemplation, and then said: "Mr. Andrews showed the best judgment."

Bob Casey, the veteran war correspondent, just returned here, after a 17,000-mile trip from Cairo. En route he wrote a 575 page book, which Bobbs-Merrill will publish. It will be called "How to Run a Railroad, or War as I Saw It." . . . The first thing Casey did in New York, after an absence of 22 months, was to buy a hot dog at a Times Square stand. . . . Clare Boothe will help edit a book for the amateur war experts. Its title will be "Elementary Military Strategy for Tablecloth Generals." . . . Doris Duke is taking singing lessons. She hopes to be able to entertain in a tour of the Army camps . . . Katharine Hepburn helped Michael Kanin and Ring Lardner, jr. receive $100,000 from M.G.M. for the shooting script of her next movie there.

The movie rights to "Separate Rooms," the show which is in its second year on Broadway, have been sold to the Hakin Brothers. The movie will be made in this city. . . . Oscar Levant and Barry Wood broadcast recently for the Defense Bonds program. They're brothers-in-law, each having married one of the Gale sisters. And both men are employed by the same tobacco company, which sponsors their programs. . . . Phil Silvers, who appeared in "Yokel Boy" before he went to Hollywood, may take over the Danny Kaye role in "Lady in the Dark." . . . Kaye and Moss Hart no longer are at odds about his sudden switch to the new Vinton Freedley musical. The actor and the playwright met last week and are friends again. . . . Burns & Allen have been signed for a soap company sponsor. Paul Whiteman's band will be co-starred.

Lion Feuchtwanger's new book will be called "The Devil in France," and will concern his experiences in a French concentration camp. Its novel feature is the fact that Feuchtwanger has no horrible experiences to report. "Since the evil was French," he explains, "he was polite, not really bad—and there was some humor or in him." . . . If Russia ever should elect to make a Petain peace with the Nazis rather than fight, John Gunther is prepared to call them The Bolshevichy. . . . Bill Slocum, CBS' Special Events man, went to Fort Benning, Ga., to interview the parachutists there. He asked one of them—a hillbilly who never had been up in a plane before—whether it frightened him. "I was scared only at being up in a plane," the parachutist confessed. "After 5 minutes I was ready to jump with or without a parachute."

When Billy Rose was negotiating with Amon Carter, the Texas publisher, about staging the Fort Worth Centennial, he demanded that $4,000,000 be spent on that project, while Carter insisted upon a $3,000,000 limit . . . In the adjoining room Rose's aide, Will Morrissey, was interviewing a woman who had a trained pigeon act. The woman asked $50 a week. Morrissey offered $30. The conversations emanating from both rooms sounded like this: "Three million" . . . "No, four million" . . . "Fifty a week" . . . "Not more than thirty" . . . Carter finally relented, and told Rose: "Okay. We'll put up $4,000,000" . . . Just then Morrissey went next door and told Billy, "She wants $50, we want to pay $30, so what'll I do with her?" . . . "Give her $40 a week," said Rose, magnanimously—and then added: "But tell her she'll have to buy the feed for the birds herself."

Louella O. Parsons

Hollywood, July 7 (INS).—Not many of us can say what we will do in the next two years, but Darryl Zanuck can tell all the pictures Tyrone Power will make in the next 24 months. A $9,000,000 budget, the longest and heaviest ever planned for one star, has been mapped out for him. He is booked to make three pictures a year and on the list is "Down to The Sea in Ships," the story of a Gloucester fisherman, and interestingly enough, the first picture Clara Bow ever made and the movie that brought her fame.

TYRONE POWER

Then there are "The Black Swan," Rafael Sabatini's private story; "Gift to The Magi," by O. Henry; "Benjamin Blake," the Revolutionary War novel, a best seller, "Brooklyn Bridge," a story of Boss Tweed's era, and, of course, his current picture, "A Yank in the R. A. F." Personally, I think Darryl is smart to let Tyrone have time off to go to Westport for a few weeks of stock, especially in a play as good as "Liliom." A few weeks on the stage is good for any actor.

Sweaters are taboo on the screen when our glamour girls wear them too prominently, but the meticulous Hays office has okayed the title, "Sweater Girl" for Paramount. This was formerly called "Sing A Song of Homicide" and stars June Preisser and Eddie Bracken. Knowing June, you can bet all the tea in China she will wear a sweater that even our grandmothers couldn't criticize. Nils Asther, who did all right in "Forced Landing," also will have a role, and that reminds me that the romance between Nils and Kay Sutton is hotter than hot.

The death of Richard Carle necessitates reshooting so many scenes in "Almost An Angel" that Bob Cummings will not finish in time to play Parris in "King's Row." That is going to be a heart-break, for Bob has looked forward to this chance to be in a Sam Woods picture. So I suppose the search will be on all over again for a new Parris. Sam had set his heart on having Tyrone Power and Bob Cummings seemed the only acceptable substitute.

The actors who have worked under the old ring master, Cecil B. DeMille, can hardly wait for the director to play himself in the picture "Glamour Boy." The star, young Jackie Cooper, is ready to give Cecil a lesson in scene stealing. It promises to be more fun than any show the famous director has ever staged.

HEDDA HOPPER

A Lot of Gossip on the Lot

Hollywood, Calif., July 7.—On the lot of "When Ladies Meet," Bob Taylor and Director Bob Leonard were discussing their new swimming pools. . . . Joan Crawford's gardening costume in the picture will be copied—and how! Made of blue and white checked gingham with a white pique apron, hat, and gloves. I like her new hair-do—piled up bangs, high as a pompadour, and long bob. While I was there, her 2-year-old Christina came to take "Mommy" home. She looked like a doll baby, done up in a pale yellow topcoat, buttoned down the front, over a yellow linen dress. Her hair is spun gold.

IDA LUPINO

Spring Byington, who originated her same comedy part on the stage, at last has a chance to show she has a figure. It's been covered up too long in those dull matronly getups. Adrian did her a colonial suit with pleated peplum jacket, patch pockets, and a tilted felt hat. Beautiful thing about Spring's comedy is that it's never forced. She has the quality of complete naturalness.

Gilbert Miller and his charming wife, who are with us for a month's visit, arrived just in time to see Louis Hayward and Ida Lupino do the last scene of "Ladies in Retirement," which Miller produced on Broadway. The thing that threw him in a heap was a painted backdrop that gave a depth of miles to the scene. "Who did that?" he demanded. "Oh, just one of the boys—why?" "WHY?" said Gilbert, "I'd like to take him back to Broadway with me. We could use him to paint scenery for the stage!"

Ran into Jane Cowl at Metro, who's coaching Jeanette MacDonald for dramatic scenes in "Smilin' Through," and asked Jane how Jeanette was doing. She said, "Oh, she'll be colossal!" Jeanette took it with a wink: "If she says I'm colossal, maybe I'm good—huh?" This is Jane's vacation. She rejoins Peggy Wood in August to do the straw-hat circuit in "Old Acquaintance."

Not since the late Marie Dressler have we had a performance like Marjorie Main's in "Barnacle Bill." How she troupes! Wally Berry is so good you gladly forget how he "hammed" up "The Bad Man." It's packed with human interest, and the scenes showing the technique of professional deep-sea fishing are mighty interesting. But Pete, the puckered pelican, all but steals the show.

Since his last picture, Charles Laughton has dropped 40 pounds. Says dieting and exercise did it. . . . He wants to do "King Lear" on the stage. . . . Mischa Auer says the worst thing about being a comedian is that other people think you have a sense of humor and unload all their corny jokes on you. "But," says Mischa, "legend to the contrary, I am not a melancholy person. The idea got started because, in repose, like a bloodhound, I have a very sad face.

Barbara Stanwyck was trying to study long lengths of dialog for her next day's shooting on "You Belong to Me," but an airplane zooming low over the house kept disrupting her. Not until Bob Taylor came in pouting did she know that all the furor had been caused by his stunting over the house for her special benefit.

Text of Message on Iceland

The President's message to Congress on sending naval forces to Iceland follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

I am transmitting herewith for the information of the Congress a message I received from the Prime Minister of Iceland on July first and the reply I addressed on the same day to the Prime Minister of Iceland in response to this message.

In accordance with the understanding so reached, forces of the United States Navy have today arrived in Iceland in order to supplement, and eventually to replace, the British forces which have until now been stationed in Iceland in order to insure the adequate defense of that country.

As I stated in my message to the Congress of September third last regarding the acquisition of certain naval and air bases from Great Britain in exchange for certain over-age destroyers, considerations of safety from overseas attack are fundamental.

The United States cannot permit the occupation by Germany of strategic outposts in the Atlantic to be used as air or naval bases for eventual attack against the Western Hemisphere. We have no desire to see any change in the present sovereignty of those regions. Assurance that such outposts in our defense frontier remain in friendly hands is the very foundation of our national security and of the national security of every one of the independent nations of the New World.

For the same reason substantial forces of the United States have now been sent to the bases acquired last year from Great Britain in Trinidad and in British Guiana in the south in order to forestall any pincers movement undertaken by Germany against the Western Hemisphere. It is essential that Germany should not be able successfully to employ such tactics through sudden seizure of strategic points in the South Atlantic and in the North Atlantic.

The occupation of Iceland by Germany would constitute a serious threat in three dimensions:

The threat against Greenland and the northern portion of the North American Continent, including the islands which lie off it.

The threat against all shipping in the North Atlantic.

The threat against the steady flow of munitions to Britain—which is a matter of broad policy clearly approved by the Congress.

It is, therefore, imperative that the approaches between the Americas and those strategic outposts, the safety of which this country regards as essential to its national security, and which it must therefore defend, shall remain open and free from all hostile activity or threat thereof.

As Commander in Chief, I have consequently issued orders to the Navy that all necessary steps be taken to insure the safety of communications in the approaches between Iceland and the United States, as well as on the seas between the United States and all other strategic outposts.

This Government will insure the adequate defense of Iceland with full recognition of the independence of Iceland as a sovereign state.

In my message to the prime minister of Iceland I have given the people of Iceland the assurance that the American forces sent there would in no way interfere with the internal and domestic affairs of that country, and that immediately upon the termination of the present international emergency all American forces will be at once withdrawn, leaving the people of Iceland and their government in full and sovereign control of their own territory.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The White House,
July 7, 1941.

MESSAGE SENT BY THE PRIME MINISTER OF ICELAND TO THE PRESIDENT.

In a conversation of June 24, the British Minister explained that British forces in Iceland are required elsewhere. At the same time he stressed the immense importance of adequate defense of Iceland. He also called my attention to the declaration of the President of the United States to the effect that he must take all necessary measures to ensure the safety of the Western Hemisphere—one of the President's measures is to assist in the defense of Iceland—and that the President is therefore prepared to send here immediately United States troops to supplement and eventually to replace the British force here. But that he does not consider that he can take this course except at the invitation of the Iceland government.

After careful consideration of all the circumstances the Iceland government, in view of the present state of affairs, admit that this measure is in accordance with the interest of Iceland, and therefore are ready to entrust the protection of Iceland to United States on the following conditions:

1. United States promise to withdraw all their military forces land, air and sea from Iceland immediately on conclusion of present war.

2. United States further promise to recognize the absolute independence and sovereignty of Iceland and to exercise their best efforts with those powers which will negotiate the peace treaty at the conclusion of the present war in order that such treaty shall likewise recognize the absolute independence and sovereignty of Iceland.

3. United States promise not to interfere with government of Iceland neither while their armed forces remain in this country nor afterwards.

4. United States promise to organize the defense of the country in such a way as to ensure the greatest possible safety for the inhabitants themselves and assure that they suffer minimum disturbance from military activities; these activities being carried out in consultation with Iceland authorities as far as possible. Also because of small population of Iceland and consequent danger to nation from presence of a numerous army, great care must be taken that only picked troops are sent there. military authorities should be also instructed to keep in mind that Icelanders have been unarmed for centuries and are entirely unaccustomed to military discipline and conduct of troops towards the inhabitants of the country should be ordered accordingly.

5. United States undertake defense of the country without expense to Iceland and promise compensation for all damage occasioned to the inhabitants by their military activities.

6. United States promise to further interests of Iceland in every way in their power, including that of supplying the country with sufficient necessities, of securing necessary shipping to and from the country and of making in other respects favorable commercial and trade agreements with it.

7. Iceland government expect that declaration made by the President in this connection will be in agreement with these promises on the part of Iceland. and government would much appreciate its being given the opportunity of being cognizant with wording of this declaration before it is published.

8. On the part of Iceland it is considered obvious that if United States undertake defense of the country it must be strong enough to meet every eventuality and particularly in the beginning it is expected that as far as possible effort will be made to prevent any special danger in connection with change-over. Iceland government lays special stress on there being sufficient airplanes for defensive purposes wherever they are required and they can be used as soon as decision is made for United States to undertake the defense of the country.

To Exchange Diplomats

You further state that this decision is made on the part of Iceland as an absolutely free and sovereign state and that it is considered as a matter of course that the United States will from the beginning recognize the legal status of Iceland, both states immediately exchanging diplomatic representatives.

I take pleasure in confirming to you hereby that the conditions set forth in your communication now under acknowledgment are fully acceptable to the Government of the United States and that these conditions will be observed in the relations between the United States and Iceland. I may further say that it will give me pleasure to request of the Congress its agreement in order that diplomatic representatives may be exchanged between our two countries.

It is the announced policy of the Government of the United States to undertake to join with the other nations of the Western Hemisphere in the defense of the New World against any attempt at aggression. In the opinion of this Government, it is imperative that the integrity and independence of Iceland should be preserved because of the fact that any occupation of Iceland by a power whose only too clearly apparent plans for world conquest include the domination of the peoples of the New World would at once directly menace the security of the entire Western Hemisphere.

It is for that reason that in response to your message, the Government of the United States will send immediately troops to supplement and eventually to replace the British forces now there.

The steps so taken by the Government of the United States are taken in full recognition of the sovereignty and independence of Iceland and with the clear understanding that American military or naval forces sent to Iceland will in no wise interfere in the slightest degree with the internal and domestic affairs of the Icelandic people; and with the further understanding that immediately upon the termination of the present international emergency, all such military and naval forces will be at once withdrawn leaving the people of Iceland and their government in full sovereign control of their own territory.

The people of Iceland hold a proud position among the democracies of the world, with an historic tradition of freedom and of individual liberty which is more than 1,000 years old. It is, therefore, all the more appropriate that in response to your message, the Government of the United States, while undertaking this defensive measure for the preservation of the independence and security of the democracies of the New World should at the same time be afforded the privilege of cooperating in this manner with your government in the defense of the historic democracy of Iceland.

I am communicating this message, for their information, to the governments of all of the other nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Home Vs. Office

The taking over of the Dupont Circle Apartments by the Government has aroused a storm of protest from tenants, some of them on long leases, who have been asked to move on less than two weeks' notice. To hunt new quarters in the tropical heat of a Washington summer would be a hardship under any conditions. But it is a gruelling experience, and for some a hopeless quest, with the city already crowded to overflowing with newcomers. Yet the personal discomfort of the evicted tenants, who have been somewhat jocularly referred to as "refugees," would weigh little in the balance against the needs of the Government if one could be sure that the Government is acting wisely in casting out several hundred persons, many of whom are Government employes working on defense assignments.

And this has yet to be proved. The efficiency of a Government worker depends quite as much upon his having a bed as a desk in an office. Although the Dupont Circle Apartments will take care of a good many more office workers than roomers, dispossession of tenants cannot be justified on any such crudely statistical basis. The simple fact is that Washington is confronted by a housing problem that is daily becoming more acute. And the Government is aggravating that shortage by moving into quarters never intended for such use. This is only a single instance of encroachment. But it is sufficiently conspicuous to serve the purpose of a "stop and look" signal. It stands to reason that the legislation already introduced into Congress to control rentals will be made infinitely more difficult of administration if the Government itself enters the market as a competitive bidder for restricted living quarters. At least the authorities should ask themselves whether the time has not come to call a halt until they are assured that adequate accommodation can be found for the people whom they dislodge.

We have stated many times that the national defense program has to be integrated and coordinated. No one program can be pushed ahead regardless of the effect upon other parts of the program. And obviously the program cannot be developed in disregard of the personal needs of the men and women without whom nothing could be accomplished.

Below The Rio Grande

At this distance it is anything but clear as to just where the responsibility lies for the sudden outbreak of hostilities in the disputed region claimed with equal vehemence by Ecuador and Peru. The Ecuadorian government charges Peru with political and military aggression. The Peruvian government insists that the flare-up followed an attack by Ecuadorian troops on Peruvian outposts. There is a strong possibility that one or both sides allowed themselves to be egged on by agents of the Axis who would like nothing better at this time than to create disorders in this hemisphere in order to prevent the full energies of the New World from being devoted to building up its defenses against totalitarian aggression.

In any event the Quito and Lima governments cannot afford to play fast and loose with the ideal of hemisphere solidarity which their representatives together with the representatives of the 19 other American republics have repeatedly supported and applauded. They are, moreover, under particular obligation to avoid a war over the disputed zone. As far back as 1936 the two nations agreed that the President of the United States should arbitrate the question if no direct settlement was possible. Unfortunately, the joint commission which met in Washington for two years were unable to reach an agreement. More recently, Argentina, Brazil and the United States proferred their services to the disputants, but thus far also without result. Still the obligation rests upon the two countries to rely upon the good offices of others.

Certainly it would be strange indeed if Ecuador and Peru chose this particular moment to come to blows over a dispute that has been going on practically from the beginning of their history as independent nations. Possibly no boundary dispute is so knotted and tangled, so incapable of solution by reference to old maps, treatises and legal documents. On the basis of these an excellent case can be made out for either side. For that very reason, therefore, the dispute cries out for arbitration by an impartial tribunal or board. Neither side would be benefited, both would be gravely injured, as would the hemisphere as a whole if they attempted to settle the argument by arbitrament to force.

Guarding Approaches

Hitler's invasion of Russia, with its revelation to even the purblind that Naziism is hell-bent upon sweeping the world, called imperatively for the assumption by this country of some of the burdens of the Atlantic defense. This we have now begun to do in respect of Iceland. Yet the arrival of our naval forces in Iceland, which the President announced to Congress yesterday, marks the first implementation of Mr. Roosevelt's fireside address of May 27, which antedated the Nazi attempt to conquer Russia.

In that speech the President laid down a new national policy which in some quarters has come to be known as the Roosevelt Doctrine. The policy simply related the concept of defense in general to the "lightning speed of modern warfare" and in particular to Hitler's threat to our continental security. Mr. Roosevelt declared that Hitlerism would be resisted from capturing control of the Atlantic or any base washed by the Atlantic which would and could be used as a jumping off ground for an attack against the Americas. He reaffirmed in the same speech our determination to deliver our supplies to Britain. Six weeks have passed, and the landing of naval units in Iceland, at the invitation of the Icelandic government, will persuade those of our people who had been waiting for action to follow words that Mr. Roosevelt was indulging in no idle oratory.

In this air age Iceland has become a tempting platform whence to launch aerial attacks on Canada and the United States. From Newfoundland to Iceland is only a little over 1,500 miles, with Greenland in between. Fifteen hundred miles make a short distance in days when bombers are shuttling daily over the Atlantic at over 300 miles an hour. How tempting is Iceland was shown soon after the Nazi occupation of Denmark, the country which was united to Iceland by a common King. Both the British and the Germans immediately saw the importance of Iceland. But the British, at Iceland's request, got in first, and Nazi attention was diverted elsewhere, though Hitler promptly included the island in his blockade zone.

What could easily happen to Iceland is apparent from the experience in Crete. In 12 days Crete was captured from the air in an exploit which conservative tacticians had deemed impossible. In similar fashion Iceland is exposed to air attack from the Nazi air bases in Norway. And sometime or other the Nazis would have got around to it. For Nazi occupation of the island would be a brace of pistols pointed at Britain to the south and America to the west. Mr. Roosevelt thus has stolen a march on the Nazis, besides relieving the British of a burden which, amid the many burdens she is bearing, she can ill afford to shoulder.

Moreover, the responsibility we have undertaken at Iceland will enable us to fulfill other pledges contained in the May 27 speech. It will facilitate the delivery of our goods to Britain. Our patrols will have a base at Iceland to which to safeguard our shipments and from which to carry out their reconnaissance work toward the south. Doubtless the step is the first of a series which were foreshadowed in the President's declaration. The fifteenth parallel, which touches Iceland on the east, goes all the way down to Dakar. And just as Iceland is the approach to North America, so Dakar, the Azores, and Cape Verde Islands are approaches to South America. If similar moves were made on the West African coast as has been made at Iceland, we should do more to assure the French in Africa that we mean business than all the oil we send to Gen. Weygand.

Even more important would be the reassurance to Latin America that we really do intend to keep Hitler out of our common front yard. They know better than we do what Hitler is aiming at. And now, since Hitler's attack on Russia, we are beginning to see ourselves the worldwide scope of Hitler's ambitions—ambitions that make our Atlantic policy merely an elementary safeguard of our territorial security.

Climax In Syria

In Syria the net around Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz and his Vichy forces is slowly but surely being drawn by the British and their Free French allies. Damascus they captured long ago in this slowest moving of all the campaigns of the present war. Now Palmyra and Deir-Ez-Zor, important air bases in eastern Syria, are in their hands, and Australian troops are reported to have crossed the Damour River, 10 miles south of Beirut. In the hope of saving lives that would otherwise be needlessly sacrificed, since the hope of successful resistance by the Vichy troops has now practically vanished, Great Britain, it is reported, has proposed a "painless armistice" to Gen. Dentz. Thus far, however, the general has given no indication that he is prepared to accept the British terms. On the contrary, Ankara has heard that the Vichy commander plans to fight to the end. But this gesture of heroism, which is so much out of line with the Vichy government's long record of surrender to the enemies of the French people, is likely to prove meaningless. Admiral Darlan's patron, Adolf Hitler, happens to be busily engaged elsewhere, and has neither the troops nor the planes to spare to pull Vichy's chestnuts out of the fire; the ammunition of the Vichy forces in Syria is running low, and rioting is believed to have broken out in the areas still under Gen. Dentz's control. The end of this tragic episode draws closer at hand. Soon all of Syria and Lebanon will be in the hands of the Allies and Vichy's gesture of fealty to the Fuehrer will have gone for naught. It has proved a tragic business all around.

Warden Lawes

For a good many years the name of Lewis B. Lawes has been associated in the public mind with liberal prison administration. And with reason. For in his 21 years of service as warden of Sing Sing he has transformed a penitentiary once known as the American Siberia into a model corrective institution.

On announcing last Sunday his impending retirement Warden Lawes summed up his administration in this fashion: "I have always attempted to steer a straight course, avoiding coddling on the one hand and brutality on the other." This is magnificent understatement. What he omitted to say was that under his direction prison inmates have learned to feel that they have more to gain by rehabilitating themselves than by continuing their war on society. Warden Lawes strengthened the guard system, and made escape more difficult. But he also got rid of the old cell blocks, improved Sing Sing's grounds, introduced more varied work, encouraged sports and provided motion pictures and radio entertainment. These innovations were revolutionary in their time, though they have since been widely copied.

Of the 36,000 or more prisoners for whom the warden has been responsible, some 300 have paid the death penalty. Many of these were vicious killers whose crime careers were a matter of record. Yet Warden Lawes has long been a bitter opponent of capital punishment, considering it at best a futile gesture. Now that he will be able to devote himself to the writing and lecturing which have made such insistent demands upon his time in the past, it may be that he will feel free to intensify his campaign against the death penalty. In any case his extraordinary experience as an intelligent, human penologist will guarantee him a hearing, not only among those of his profession, but also among laymen who have the good sense to appreciate that crime is first of all a community problem.

Britain's Taxes

How the British people have been drawn together in their common struggle with Nazi Germany is illustrated no more eloquently than in the leveling of incomes. Wars up till World War I generally bred a new class of war profiteers in Britain who were gradually merged with the aristocracy. World War I produced as many specimens, perhaps, as the Napoleonic wars. But in this war there seem to be no profiteers—at least they are not allowed to keep much of the profits. According to the London Economist, the highest net income in this land of stately homes and inherited wealth cannot be much more than $28,000, and only a few hundred persons can now receive incomes of more than $16,000. This is due, of course, to the attentions of the tax gatherer. Taxation is hardly the word for his exactions; confiscation would be better. For instance, the income left after taxes on a gross of $600,000 is $28,600. This leveling of incomes contributes no doubt to the unity and courage which are attending the present magnificent episode in the island story.

DAWN

I have seen daylight come like a girl, rapt
In a dream, like a young girl finding spring in her heart;
Full of radiance of hidden suns.
I have seen daylight walk as a young girl walks on the hills,
As a running fox is trapped who must bark the moon
High into heaven, who must stare with moonlit eyes at the start
Of the strangest thing he knows: the moon
Rising at the world's throat.
So is the daylight tranced
At the vast retreating edge of night; following like a girl
In spring the retreating moon, the owl's low sound,
The larks coming into being
Along the discovered ground.

Nazi Plane Output.

Mr. Lindbergh asserts that the Nazis have 40,000 or 50,000 planes and that we can never equal their ability to produce. If they had that many, why didn't they continue daylight raids on England after September 15, 1940, when they had England almost beaten? Why today does the Luftwaffe give up both its bombing of England and the defense of the Western Front while it is attacking Russia? The answer to both questions is that the reports of German air supremacy like the report of Mark Twain's death in that famous story of his, are greatly exaggerated. When Mr. Lindbergh visited Germany, Herr Goering put one over on the aviator. Mr. Wall, recently returned from Germany, estimates that Germany produces every month considerably less than 2,500 planes of all types: Training, pursuit, combat, bombers. But Mr. Wall does not admire Nazis and so is not gullible enough to accept Herr Goering's figures. As long ago as last April, we made 1,427 planes a month. By December, our output will be more than doubled. That will not merely equal, it will outstrip the Reich.

Is Lindbergh's testimony reliable?

ERNEST S. QUIMBY.

Aid To Russia

By rendering help to Russia, we will not only contribute to the ultimate defeat of of Germany, but also prove to the satisfaction of the Russians that not all capitalistic countries are inimical to them, that the line of cleavage is created by the antisocial conduct of some nations, by their predatory nature, and not by their philosophy of government.

By coming to their aid, we shall prove to them beyond peradventure of doubt that the destruction of their state was never essential to our national interest, that on the contrary we are willing to sacrifice in a measure for its survival. A splendid opportunity thus presents itself to the democratic nations of the world to bring Russia into the family of law abiding and cooperating nations.

Price Of Wheat

The price of wheat is about the same now as it was a hundred years ago when harvested under more primitive conditions. During this time the improvement in labor saving machinery and transportation facilities should have reduced the selling price at least 50 per cent. The price has been kept up (1) by the artificially high price of land at this time; this was negligible in the early days of Kansas; (2) by the protective tariff duty on wheat of 42 cents per bushel; and (3) fixing of the price by the Government at an artificially high figure. These irregularities could be righted (1) by taxing the full value of ground rent; (2) by international free trade, and (3) by repeal of the paternalistic AAA legislation.

At the present time wheat growers are requested to sign up with the Government's cooperative agreement. Those who do not do so and who grow wheat in excess of their quota cannot sell this excess, cannot use it for seeding, and cannot feed it to their poultry or hogs unless they pay to the Government a penalty of 49 cents per bushel for doing so. No wheat can be sold unless a Government card is presented. The Government has been loaning cooperators about 97 cents per bushel or about 20 cents above the market price. Every wheat field has to be measured by a Government official. This information should be of interest to those who may have assumed that we were free from the state socialism which now prevails in Europe. Incidentally the spirit of '76 is not dead. Thousands of Kansas farmers are rebellious concerning this matter.

Sources Of Crime

Washington has recently experienced a wave of violent crime that has justly aroused public indignation. In an effort to get at the basic cause of it all the Police Department is being made the chief target of attack. As President of the North Randle Citizens Association and chairman of the Federal Employes Council, I am vitally interested in anything that affects the welfare of our city and the Government employe.

Since an investigation is being conducted, those conducting it might do well to investigate some of the major sources of crime in this city. Gambling is an excellent illustration. This vice every year is responsible for a number of murders and suicides and thefts and embezzlements. What is being done to aid the police in enforcing gambling laws? Certainly the general public does not lend its full-hearted cooperation.

'Inaction'

What is our President waiting for? Can't he see that the sinking of the Robin Moor was reason enough to use our naval and air forces to protect our shipping? Mr. Knox, in his great speech at Boston, might be said almost to have gone on his knees to the President to speak the word that might set free the forces that with God's blessing may overthrow Hitler. Unfortunately Mr. Roosevelt arouses our hopes by his words, but then dashes them by his inaction.

"Full speed ahead!" was uttered months and months ago, and where are we now? I honestly think that Hitler has good reason for thinking he can run such a risk as this "God-given chance," because Roosevelt will delay long enough to nullify it. What has the President done about the Robin Moor, except to deliver a fine radio address with a thrilling wind-up?

Has Hitler Laid The Basis For A World Democratic Front?

Adolf Hitler in his sudden attack on Russia has launched a terrific threat in this direction and has handed us our first big scare. But it may also be possible that he has handed us our first great opportunity to split up the Axis and organize a grand coalition against him.

The German invasion of Russia presents two very different aspects. Under the one, the position of Hitler might be vastly strengthened; under the other, it might be seriously or fatally undermined.

If European Russia is quickly reduced, then Hitler might turn back for an early attempt at invading Britain, or he might elect to push on eastward, overrunning China, India and Siberia, effecting a junction with the Japanese and aiding them to take Singapore and open up the Indian Ocean route to the Persian Gulf and Red Sea. The first alternative might end the war in Europe and leave us face to face with a victorious Germany in the Atlantic. The second, if the British were then swept out of the Mediterranean, would enable Hitler to smash the blockade and dig in for a war of almost indefinite duration. With the raw materials of the East and the shipyards of all Europe, he could hope eventually to build up a naval power that could dispute the Anglo-Saxon control of the seas.

But in the very scope of its world menace lies the weakness of Hitler's latest great offensive. Access to southeastern Asia is the key to escape from the blockade. Only there can Germany get the desperately needed supplies of rubber, tin, alloy metals, vegetable oils and—in part—petroleum. But a German march to that region means the conquest of all Asia. It means that India, China, Arabia, et al will become slave colonies of the feared and hated swastika. It means that Japan will become a vassal nation but little better off than Italy or France, her dream of a greater East Asian Lebensraum permanently and wholly shattered.

In other words, Hitler's drive to the eastward creates a solidarity of basic interests throughout the Orient, and between the Orient and the Western democracies—as well as Russia (about which we do not need to worry greatly). Assuredly Japan would be worse off under a Nazi regime in Asia than under continuance of an Anglo-Saxon world leadership. And so would all the colonial or "backward" countries of the Orient.

Consequently it would seem that American and British diplomacy was confronted here with a unique opportunity. If an appeal were made from Washington and London to Chinese and Indian nationalism, Japanese self-interest and Russia's dire necessity, might not a united Eastern front be created which would tie up the enormous German forces indefinitely in Soviet territory, prolong the opportunity for Allied counter-offensives, and lay the basis for a peaceful order throughout the Far East?

In the face of this common danger, which all the Orient must be eyeing with deep alarm, might it not be possible to terminate the war in China, restore the territorial integrity of that country, and induce at least a temporary resolution of the conflict between Hindu and Moslem in India, between Nationalists and Communists in China, which is clouding the future of those countries as independent nations?

It would be necessary to offer reasonably generous terms to the Indians and Chinese regarding autonomy and equality status. Some "face-saving" formula would have to be devised for Japan—possibly recognition of her conquest of Manchuria—to induce her to withdraw from China proper and forego her southern adventure. And this would have to be linked with a Russian withdrawal from at least Inner Mongolia and the northwest Chinese provinces—an action which could be forced, if necessary. The Russian forces in Siberia, of course, should be invited to remain and cooperate with the anti-Nazi coalition in causing Hitler to worry about his new eastern frontier.

As for European Russia, while any practicable measures should be taken to prolong its resistance, there is obviously no means of preserving it from the German clutches. It is gone—and with it the Stalin regime, which relieves us of any qualms of conscience over appearing to defend Communism. Stalin's outfit can never stand the pressure of a major war. They may be deposed by Hitler. Or if the latter is eventually crushed by the Allies, the Stalin gang will be smashed by their own people before the Nazi army of occupation is out of sight across the border.

As far as the present is concerned, if the above analysis is approximately correct, what is now needed is action—quick, shrewd and vigorous action. The United States is in this war. Everybody knows it. Public opinion would probably welcome decisive measures. Few would be shocked by fireworks on the diplomatic front, a jolt to "American tradition" in foreign affairs, or even the violent death of a few Nazis at the hands of American Marines or naval gunners.

The Post Impressionist

The Last Launch

We had steamed along the island of Martinique long before daybreak and now had anchored just outside the harbor of Fort-de-France, once known as Fort Royal Bay. It is a fine, deep harbor and our steamer was only a few minutes' away by row-boat.

The town was very near, the old fort hugging the water's edge and the white statue of the Empress Josephine standing in her regal robes in the Place de la Savane.

Most passengers were going ashore, but I was scheduled to go to St. Pierre and keep faith with Dr. Perret and do something about the story I was trailing. I had met the eminent volcanologist en voyage. He had gotten off at Montserrat in a row-boat at midnight, as Mount Soufriere was throwing off alarming sulphur fumes, giving the inhabitants a bad case of the jitters.

The launch in which we were to go would hold a dozen comfortably. I was there early and sat just across from the black native who drove the boat. However, when we were all in there were just about double that number, with the fat ones distributed unevenly around and about. There were the usual jest and laughter, but not for long for we soon got into deep sea with heavy running surf, and the man who drove the launch buckled down to serious business. It was, supposedly, a 45-minute run.

I became engrossed with the skill of that black man at the helm. The whites of his eyes grew bigger and bigger as the black beads of his pupils flashed in regular rhythm from one big wave to another. My admiration increased as I watched him. He was keyed up, it was evident, but he never lost grip on himself nor the boat for a split second.

In the direction we were headed was that old murderess, Mme. Pelee, basking as it were in the sun, with a white scarf draped deceptively around her burning throat. Her disposition is governed by the kind of a chapeau she wears. If the rim is broken up in curves and cut-outs, all is well with the island, but the instant that Amazon chooses a helmet for a headdress, it is time for the natives to move and take everything with them. According to Dr. Perret, had this been known, the loss of 30,000 lives could have been prevented in that devastating holocaust of 1902.

Although we were not even there yet the passengers began wondering how we would ever get back, for we would then be going against the tide. The tension eased somewhat as our boatman began to work the launch over where it would not be so far to swim or float should the boat capsize. It was easy now; we were pulling up to the wharf and everyone gave a sigh of relief, still dogged, however, by the fear of the return trip.

We visited the Musee Volcanologique made possible by the untiring energy of Dr. Perret. Besides the many valuable specimens pertinent to volcanology which he has collected from all over the globe, the many household and personal things he has excavated from the ruins of St. Pierre emphasize the great tragedy on that bright May morning 39 years ago. The collection of men's and ladies' watches is a pathetic reminder of the fatal moment when Pelee struck.

Time was pressing. Dave, our very able cruise manager, was fully awake to the danger of a return trip and so began a long barter with some Frenchmen for transportation overland to Fort-de-France. I sat under a large tree with two girls from New York on that now sad little thoroughfare once known by the impressive name of Rue Victor Hugo. The chickens scratched dirt over our shoes and chased bugs up and down the street. They were the most energetic things I saw on the island. Dave was standing not far away concluding his bargaining. Finally something that resembled an antiquated school bus came wobbling over the cobblestones toward us. A man behind us suggested that we hasten and get "good" seats. I drew a three-slat affair all out of alignment.

We stopped and we stopped. First for gas and then for oil and finally a gendarme must accompany us. Besides the driver we already had a sort of major domo conducting things from the rear. We were at the end of the city now getting out on the mountain road, and our ancient equipage began to develop surprising speed, which was, however, marred by frequent interruptions such as flat tires. Great vistas of beauty began to open up before us. There was Pelee with a snowy sombrero, marvelous glimpses of the blue Caribbean, huge plantations with brilliant tropical flowers and small religious shrines placed in secluded spots by the roadside.

But we were moving toward Fort-de-France. We glimpsed the town in the distance. We knew, too, it was sailing time for the old Nerissa and our captain would never think of leaving so large a party—if one or two stragglers, perhaps—but not so many passengers! The cruise director urged more speed. We flew past the Botanical Gardens in a whirl of dust. We just caught a glimpse of Josephine's statue as we sped to the wharf. The row boats were lined up and Dave rushed us into those boats without ceremony. We scrambled fore and aft and were off.

The captain had his field glasses glued to the horizon searching for the missing launch as we reached the steamer from the other side. He had held the ship one hour and a half.

It was the last trip of the kind ever made.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Divide And Conquer

WHILE THE JAPANESE government has announced that it will not say what Japan has actually decided to do, there is no doubt about what the Japanese wish us to do. They wish us to think they are about to do such tremendous things in the Far East all the way from Siberia to Singapore that we shall feel compelled to turn our attention from the Battle of the Atlantic in order to safeguard the position in the Pacific.

LIPPMANN

Thus it is evident that Japan is not taking an independent course, but is playing her appointed role in the tripartite alliance with Berlin and Rome. The role of Japan is to paralyze the American Navy during the Battle of the Atlantic. For the supreme objective of the totalitarian states is to divide and conquer—to be able to deal separately with the British navy and then with the American, never with the two navies combined. For the Japanese and the Germans know quite well that the combined naval power of Britain and America is almost certainly too much for them. They must, if possible, try to defeat the British before the British are reinforced by the Americans and then, if they have disposed of the British, there will be nobody to reinforce the Americans. Though this is the classic strategy of the conquerors in all ages, in Tokyo and Berlin they hope that the filibustering bloc in the Senate of the United States will not understand it.

THERE CAN BE little doubt that this is the plan of the maneuver by which Tokyo and Berlin hope to outwit and defeat us. What they want us to do is to keep the fleet frozen at Hawaii where it can do no real harm either to Japan or to Germany. For they know that while the Battle of the Atlantic is undecided, the United States can never afford to engage its whole naval power in a Far Eastern war. If the battle went badly for the British, lacking reinforcements from the United States, we should be compelled to bring most of the fleet to the Atlantic in order to defend the Western Hemisphere. Thus we should not be able to win the Far Eastern war and we should be in grave danger of losing the Atlantic war.

That is why the Japanese, in agreement with the Nazis, do everything they can to make us feel that we must keep an overwhelming naval force in the Pacific. Ordinarily, a nation in the position of Japan would aim to have us reduce our naval forces in the Pacific. Actually the Japanese policy is to induce us to keep our greatest naval force confronting Japan. Why do the Japanese wish us to concentrate our Navy against them? Because they believe that we shall never dare to use our Navy against them while the Battle of the Atlantic is in doubt and because they know that we shall never be able to use our Navy against them if the British lose the Battle of the Atlantic.

THE JAPANESE, in other words, wish to have our fleet frozen at Hawaii in order that it shall not reinforce the British and so help to win the Battle of the Atlantic. For they know quite well that if Britain and America win the Battle of the Atlantic, they can then easily enough win the Battle of the Pacific. If, on the other hand, we lose in the Atlantic, we shall also lose in the Pacific.

The Japanese hope that our people, unused to thinking about war and the strategy of war, will be bluffed and outwitted, and will fail to see through this great maneuver. Yet perhaps we shall not be so stupid as they hope, or so confused as much of the current debate would lead a foreigner to suppose.

For once we see that the object of our adversaries is to freeze the fleet until it is too late for the fleet to be effective, our true policy becomes quite clear. Instead of asking ourselves how much of the fleet we can spare for duty in the Atlantic, we should reverse the calculation and ask ourselves how much of the fleet we need in the Atlantic to make certain that we can reinforce the British navy successfully.

That is the minimum naval force we need in the Atlantic. If we do not reinforce the British and they are defeated, we shall need very much more than that. Does this weaken the position in the Pacific? Only on paper and not in fact. For though we have a great naval force in the Pacific, it is not really available against Japan as long as there is danger of Hitler getting into the Atlantic. Of the fleet in the Pacific, all that is in fact available against Japan is that portion of it which would not, in case of British defeat, have to be brought into the Atlantic.

THEREFORE, whether Japan is bluffing or is intending to commit a new aggression in the Far East, we should not be duped by the maneuver; we should still unfreeze the fleet so as to insure command of the Atlantic. That will still leave Japan facing greater forces than could be aligned against her under any other circumstances: it will leave Japan facing China, facing Russia, facing the British, Dutch and American forces in the South Pacific, facing a still powerful American fleet and the whole potential power of an Allied and American blockade and embargo.

If, on the other hand, we are outwitted into freezing the fleet and thereby losing the Battle of the Atlantic, our reasonably strong position in the Far East will collapse almost entirely. A defeat of the British in Europe would gravely undermine the whole Allied position in the Far East and we should have little attention or power that we could devote to the Orient. The fact is that we and the Allies are now relatively stronger as against Japan than we have been. We shall never be strongoer until the Battle of the Atlantic is won. We shall be infinitely weaker if the Battle of the Atlantic is lost.

THUS, SINCE JAPAN has decided to act with the European Axis, since the object of her action is to keep us from reinforcing the position in the Atlantic, the proper reply to Japan is to reinforce the Atlantic decisively and, as a measure of emphasis that will be clear in Tokyo, to intensify rather than to relax the economic pressure on Japan and the assistance to China.

Farm Funds Distributed

Big Firms Benefit

By the Associated Press

INSURANCE companies and Federal Land Banks topped a list of big benefit payments the Agriculture Department reported yesterday it had made to farm operators for complying with major phases of 1939 crop control programs.

The largest single payment—$133,191—went to the Prudential Insurance Co. of America at Newark, N. J. The second biggest was $98,332, paid the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., of New York. The Federal Land Bank of Omaha, Nebr., was close behind with a $92,963 payment. Eleven other insurance companies received in excess of $35,000.

Officials explained these large payments reflected immense holdings of farmland insurance concerns and banks had acquired through investments or foreclosures, the latter process coming about during the post-World War depression.

The list made public yesterday contained the names of 43,454 persons and concerns who received $1,000 or more in payments authorized under the soil conservation and price-adjustment programs of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration for the 1939 crop year. The farm law requires that such a list be reported to Congress.

The department explained that less than 1 per cent of the farm operators who cooperated with the farm programs received more than $1,000. It said there were 5,756,240 payees under the conservation program. They received a total of approximately $500,000,000. There were 3,467,000 payees under the price-adjustment program. They received about $212,000,000. In most cases operators who received one type of payment received the other.

CONSERVATION payments are made for adjusting plantings of "soil-depleting" crops to AAA recommendations and for carrying out soil-building practices. Parity payments are designed to bring a farmer's return from the so-called "basic" crops—cotton, wheat, corn, tobacco and rice—nearer the level of farm purchasing power of the 1910-1914 period.

Under the farm law no payment of more than $10,000 may be made under the conservation program, but this limitation does not apply to parity payments. The department reported that 457 payments of $10,000 or more were made. Fewer than 10 per cent of the cooperating farm operators received more than $200 each, the department said.

Of the 5,756,000 participating in the conservation program, 1,425,931 reecived $20 or less, the department reported. Likewise, 2,648,000 of the 5,475,000 participating in the price-adjustment program received $20 or less.

Latin-American Labor

By Glen Levin Swiggett

The Outlook Brightens

INTERNATIONAL LABOR was greatly confused by the Russo-German Pact of August, 1939. The Russo-German war will, perhaps, clarify this confusion. The Soviet government, whatever the outcome of the war may be, will probably regain, at least in Latin America, the confidence of organized labor oriented to the politico-economic principles of communism. If the war continues for some time, it may even secure the cooperation of unfriendly labor groups attached to the International Labor Office. This support may not immediately be given. Such labor could not foresee a situation which might induce the American Federation of Labor to cooperate with the Soviet Third International, cordially disliked by such leaders of A. F. of L. as Green and Tobin, who have been supporting the President's foreign policy, until now, without reservation.

The international labor situation today is not unlike that immediately preceding and following the First World War. Whenever labor departs, for political reasons, from its own objectives of social-economic betterment, faction and division arise. Factional forces are at work now, as then. There were disruptive forces within Latin-American labor before Samuel Gompers began to build a Pan-American Federation of Labor in 1917. The Mexican Regional Workers Confederation, or C. R. O. M., grew out of the Mexican I. W. W. Luis Morones, his ally, was the leader of the latter in 1915-16. There was a Red Socialist set-up in Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Uruguay. In some of these countries there were even sympathetic governments.

IT IS RATHER a sad commentary that a great labor leader, Samuel Gompers, the cigarmaker, who had worked in the nineties for the independence of Cuba and Puerto Rico, should have to face, due to his support of President Wilson, at the end of the World War of 1914, the challenge of disruptive radical labor at home and in Latin America. For example, John Lewis was strong enough to poll at the Denver convention in 1921 for the presidency of the A. F. of L. half as many votes as Gompers. The Communist and the Communist Labor Parties were formed about this time. A few years later Lewis formed C. I. O.; and in Mexico, replacing C. R. O. M., his ally, Lombardo Toledano, built the most powerful labor organization in Latin America. The Latin-American Federation of Labor, or C. T. A. L., of which Toledano is secretary general, has practically nullified effective influence of the Pan-American Federation of Labor. Organized in Argentina and in most of the Caribbean and West Coast countries, one may confidently expect it to become a strong political factor in Latin America since the Roosevelt-Welles statement concerning aid to Soviet Russia.

Even where exploited in the interest of political factional strife, organized labor in Latin America has long been oriented to Soviet ideology. Divided by the Stalin-Trotsky controversy, confused by the Hitler-Stalin Pact, and disturbed by war attitudes of governments, Latin-American labor in general never identified government and labor philosophy in Russia as it has in Germany and Italy. The attack in Mexico of C. T. M. and C. T. A. L. national and continental labor unions, is against Nazi-fascism, to include recently sinarchism which is identified with falangism, representing the Spanish state and church of the Franco regime.

LATIN-AMERICAN left wing labor has traveled far down the Russian road. It has had the sympathy or support of radical or liberal governments in Mexico, Chile, Cuba and Colombia. It has had occasional encouragement in Argentina, Bolivia, Ecuador, Costa Rica, El Salvador and Uruguay. It has had to walk warily in Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Peru and Venezuela. It has suffered exile and imprisonment in Brazil. Mexican Labor News of May 1 reported cruel treatment of the former Communist leader, Luis Carlos Prestes, now in jail in Rio de Janeiro. But Communists are active either openly or secretly from cells in Latin America. Even if frowned upon, they have made their force felt through fear in Brazil and in Peru, the home country of Raul Haya de la Torre and the Apristas, and in the Dominican Republic.

What effect will the Russo-German War have upon the attitude of these Latin governments toward left wing labor? Opposition of some of them to Nazi-fascism has been a kind of lip-service to the continental defense policy of the United States. Latin-American military dictators have a congenital dislike for communistic Russia. If, however, for continental politico-economic reasons, they should now accept Russia as an ally, the favoring effect upon Lombardo Toledano's labor organization will be colossal. It would also seem that the labor policy of the Roosevelt Administration will be to swing definitely to C. I. O., friendly ally and collaborator of the Mexican Federation that set up the Latin-American Federation four years ago in Mexico with the assistance of delegates from Spain, France and the United States, and from Argentina, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Mexico, Uruguay, Ecuador, Colombia, Costa Rica and Nicaragua. Spain and France were represented by the minister of justice in Azana's cabinet, secretary general in the General Workers Union of Spain by Leon Jouhaux, secretary-general of the General Workers Federation for France.

MOST OF THE delegates to this organizing conference represented Soviet-sympathizing unions, which will undoubtedly be greatly strengthened by the Nazi-Soviet conflict. Facing this fact, it would seem there is no other course for the A. F. of L. than to swallow a distasteful labor ideology; to discard present plans for revamping the Pan-American Federation of Labor, inactive since the downfall of Morones; and, for patriotic motives, to join forces with C. I. O. in the Latin-American Federation of Labor. The Nazi-Fascist war, whatever the outcome may be, was certainly a boon for Communist and near-Communist labor. It can also become, if common sense is observed and realities are recognized, a greater boon for Pan-American governments, including our own, which are sincerely seeking some real and adequate formula for continental security. No instrument can serve this end so well just now, and certainly more permanently, than organized labor. It looks, however, as if Latin-American labor will no longer serve as the tool of government. Lombardo Toledano stated in his historic address, June 7, to Latin-American labor that the interests of labor and popular governments were identical. Their purpose is to serve popular welfare, national, continental or international.

THE TACTICS and objectives of labor organized in Mexico and in Moscow seem to have much in common. For seven years under a sympathetic president and his successor, Avila Camacho, the influence of Lombardo Toledano's labor organizations has steadily increased in Latin America. If the military dictators should now fail to heed, due to their innate dislike of communism, the demands of left-wing labor for social-economic reforms, following in the wake of a redeemed Russia, as radical labor interprets Russia's break with Germany, it may well happen that a series of revolutions will again sweep through Latin America, as happened just after the depression years of 1929-1930.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Spelvin Sputters

DRIVING to work this morning, George Spelvin, American, thought as follows:

So now, finally, it says in the paper where two loving young things, well, they just finally couldn't wait another hour, so they got on the plane with a party of friends and flapped away on the wings of love to some place down there and they eloped and got married, and now they are wed and how about getting up a pool on how long this thing lasts? But who they are eloping from it doesn't say, because an elopement is where the girl's old man would be sleeping with one ear out the window and her brothers would be setting up with shotguns to blow him down, whereas in a case like this, why, their worst enemy couldn't wish them anything worse than marriage, and her former husbands and his former wives ought to get together and pass a resolution that it serves them right.

PEGLER

But I can't understand why they bother to get married anyway, because she certainly is smart enough to know that he is strictly on the chisel and never owned as much as a suit of clothes free and clear. And if he is so smart and a bon vivant and all like that, and a man about town, he certainly knows that she has been in circulation for anyway 12 years at least, and I don't see how that makes her any shy young thing, especially when you remember those other marriages and the stink when they busted up.

I SUPPOSE it is just the difference whether you hang around high-class saloons and get your picture in the papers saying you are a madcap darling, and sometimes it states you are blazing or sometimes you are on fire when, if you were just a neighborhood dame and you did like that the neighbors would just say you were drunk and disorderly and a chaser and a little bum and a disgrace to your old parents, and the saloonkeepers around the block would brush you off. Because you take, if a neighborhood girl spends all her time around saloons and gets a reputation, why the neighbors they probably have got some daughters and sons coming along and they won't even let their kids tell you the time, but the same people when they read about this elopement they will not think of it that way.

But it certainly does make a faint trace of a pensive smile flicker about your pretty little mouth when you stop to think about these people eloping like this and all the secrecy and only a party of friends and the photographer and the press agent for the resort where they eloped to, and we are supposed to say how too utterly damn romantic, and they were just made for each other when they were both probably so plastered they didn't know what they were doing or they would have cut their throats first and, anyway, what is the idea of getting married, anyway, when they seem to be getting along all right together unless marriage is their way of getting a legal separation, because that kind usually break it up within six months after they do elope, and I will guarantee to stand on my head every minute this one lasts beyond a year at the outside.

IT ISN'T very important, but it certainly seems like that kind ought to pay some kind of special tax on their wedding, like, for instance, $500 each for the second one and $1,000 each for the third and so forth, because they certainly get more service out of the courts than normal people, and it costs money to build a courthouse and pay judges and clerks and heat and light. Or it would cool them off if the law said no divorce for at least ten years, because if they had to stay married ten years they would stay bachelors forever, and here I am late again. Good morning, Boss, I had a flat.

Russo-German War

By Harold J. Laski

Its Repercussions In Britain

London.

THE MAIN INTEREST these days is still the German attack on the Soviet Union. Certain things, I think, are already clear.

LASKI

The attack has killed appeasement so finally that in the heart of the City of London the presence of the Soviet ambassador evokes loud cheers. There is great satisfaction that Sir Stafford Cripps—for the quality of whose work Mr. Eden bore testimony—is already back in Moscow with what looks like a first-rate expert mission of advisers. Everyone realizes that if the Russians hold, Hitler's power enters upon the last phase of its life.

The Communist Party has taken the expected line. Full support for the war, demands for more energetic production, enthusiasm for Mr. Churchill's declaration of June 22—it is now a holy war instead of an imperialist war. It will be interesting to see what happens to Mr. Palme Dutt's book. It was announced for this month with a great blare of trumpets. The secretary of the Communist Party was going to prove the folly of British policy in general and the futility of the Labor Party in particular. He was going to show how a good Marxist must necessarily accept his own special brand of revolutionary defeatism. I do not suppose the book will appear now. The Communist Party is even anxious for a discussion with the Labor Party as to the ways and means of collaboration. The betrayer of the working class of yesterday is in the vanguard in the "people's war" of today. The Daily Worker has even asked the Government to release it from ban on the grounds that it is firmly committed to support of the war effort. I imagine that in all possibility we will hear in the next few weeks that the People's Convention movement is being wound up; poor Mr. Pritt (D. N. Pritt, Labor M. P.), I fear he will be left sitting out on a limb.

IT IS A tragic-comic situation. It is comic in that it shows how unreal is the Communist claim to apply Marxian methods and analysis to concrete historical situations. What they do is to pick up any kind of doctrine which they hope will serve to defend the particular line of policy the Soviet Union pursues. The imperialist war is now a holy war because Hitler attacked Russia. But if the Soviet Union had agreed to accept a body of shameful demands in order to avoid war, we should have had lyrics about Stalin's realistic statesmanship and this holy war would have remained an imperialist war. The Communists are now back to where they were before the Russo-German pact of August, 1939. All the old slogans have been refurbished exactly as though they were in continuous use without a 21-month interval. Even the Finnish war is now explained as a stage in the war against Hitler. A party whose principles have this elasticity stands self-condemned.

But this situation has its tragic side. Many British Communists are people of exceptional devotion and energy. Two or three of them, Harry Pollitt for instance, ought to have been among the labor leaders of this generation. They have deprived themselves of the influence they ought to have exerted because they have forgotten the truth of Coleridge's famous maxim: "It makes all the difference in the world whether you put truth in the first place or the second place." They have insisted on emphasizing facts solely to assist the view they desire to put over. Only the day before the German attack a Communist interruptor of a meeting of mine insisted that Mr. Churchill would gladly do a deal with Hitler if that led to the destruction of the Soviet Union.

NOW IT IS plain common sense that Mr. Churchill, for the last eight years, has been an ardent protagonist of an understanding with Russia exactly because of his estimate of the German danger. Until the Russian-German war if it was necessary for every Communist to deny that this was so or to say that if Mr. Churchill moved to active suport of the Soviet Union he would be repudiated by "class forces" he "represents." It was necessary to say either of these things because otherwise the Russian treaty with Hitler could not be explained away. Now that Mr. Churchill "agreebaly surprised" Mr. Gallacher (Communist M.P.) by the speed and vigor of his pledge of all British aid to Russia, Mr. Churchill is going to be restored to the heroic role he occupied in the "popular front" period.

It would be a grand thing for the working class movement of the world if at this juncture the Communist Party made up its mind that there are certain simple virtues in politics which in the long run confer strength and not weakness upon a party. First is the direct relationship between the principles you profess and the action you take. That direct relation is absent if you spend years denouncing appeasement and then eulogize a super-Munich as a miracle of statesmanship. Second is the use of straightforward methods. I doubt whether anything has done more to antagonize the trade unions against Communists than their methods of penetration and their use of an alias.

Some really admirable bodies in this country provoke skepticism by their habits simply because it is suspected that they are tools—often unconscious tools—of the Communist Party. The third virtue is to recognize that there can really be honest divergences of opinion in politics and that your opponent is not necessarily a rogue and a blackguard if he does not agree with you.

AMERICANS will remember the long years in which John Strachey was the white-haired boy of the Communist Party. His books were always praised. Then Mr. Strachey refused to accept the policy of revolutionary defeatism. Immediately all the party apparatus was turned on him for his denigration. Now the white-haired boys are J. B. S. Haldane and the dean of Canterbury—the latter of whom, it is said, was so gloriously naive as to congratulate the Soviet ambassador on Stalin's great victory in the Russian elections. Praise and blame alike are simply weapons in the service of the party. A leading sympathizer never writes an indifferent book, not even Earl Browder—and always makes a masterly speech.

I emphasize these things because we have reached one of those phases in British politics where the Communist Party will seek a modus vivendi with the Labor Party. They have now the great common end of defeating the supreme foe of the working class in modern history. Labor unity is a matter of real importance. Yet it will be very difficult to attain because Communist habits have made distrust of their party so profound and, I add, so justifiable.

Cooperation is not easy with men who denounced you yesterday and, given a turn in the wheel, may well be denouncing you again tomorrow. Cooperation is not easy with men who yesterday said it made no difference to the workers whether they are ruled by Hitler or Churchill and today assure the Churchill government of their full-hearted support. When Lenin created the Third International he did immeasurable damage to the cause he wished to serve.

Iceland Lies 900 Miles West of Bergen

120,000 Scandinavians Live on Island, Fourth Of Which Is Habitable

The Kingdom of Iceland lies far out in the North Atlantic, about 680 miles west of Bergen, Norway, and 2,600 miles northeast of New York. Its population of 120,000, almost entirely of pure Scandinavian stock, literally lives off the sea, as fish and fish products constitute about 85 per cent of all exports. Its largest city is the capital, Reykjavik, with a population of 36,100.

Iceland is about the size of Kentucky, with approximately 40,000 square miles, but only one-fourth of its area is habitable, as it is a country of mountains, lava fields, glaciers and high plateaus which slope to the coastal lowlands. The island is in roughly the same latitude as Nome, Alaska, and lies in, but near the outer edge of, the Gulf Stream, hence its climate is influenced by the polar ice packs, which occasionally blockade its numerous harbors on the north coast, but do not materially affect the principal harbor of Reykjavik, located on the west coast. There are no mineral resources and almost all of Iceland's water power, estimated at 2,500,000 horsepower, remains unharnessed. Many of the buildings in Reykjavik are heated by hot springs.

Only about one-half of 1 per cent of the country's total area is under cultivation, and the short summers limit crops largely to hay and potatoes. There are large tracts of grass lands, however, and sheep raising is important; in all about 36 per cent of the population derives its living from agriculture.

Fishing and the fish-products industry furnishes a living to nearly 30 per cent of the population. The Icelandic fish trade was serevely affected by the depression and the Spanish Civil War. Italy, Spain and Portugal took 52 per cent of all Icelandic exports in 1929, but only 15 per cent in 1939. These countries were heavy buyers of dried split cod, so, to compensate for the drop in sales of this commodity, the manufacture of fish products, such as herring oil, cod liver oil and fish meal was expanded. A number of other small manufacturing industries were also fostered by the state.

The codfish catch in 1938 was poor for the third successive year, stocks were inadequate and prices for fish products were much lower; these unfavorable factors were only partially offset by increased exports of fresh and salt fish. To ease the position of its fishing population the Icelandic government, on April 5, 1939, devalued the crown by 18 per cent from the pegged rate of 22.15 to 27.0 to the pound sterling (a decline from approximately $0.21 to $0.17). By a law of September 18, 1939, the value of the Icelandic crown must be adjusted to the dollar whenever the pound sterling declines below $4.15.

Imports in 1939 totaled $10,879,000 and exports $12,294,000 as against $10,812,000 and $12,717,000, respectively, in 1938. The export excess was the fifth in succession. About 20 per cent of exports is cooperatively marketed. Although Icelandic foreign trade was a Danish monopoly until 1854, Denmark dropped to second place as a supplier, with 21 per cent of total imports. The United Kingdom was first in that year with 22 per cent, and Germany, which had been gaining rapidly for several years under a special trade arrangement, was third with 16 per cent.

All imports are rigidly controlled and were directed as far as possible to the United Kingdom, Germany, Italy and Spain, the principal buyers of Icelandic fish. The United Kingdom was also Iceland's best customer in 1939 with 17 per cent of all exports, followed by Denmark with 11 per cent, and Germany 11 per cent. Heavy purchases of cod liver oil placed the United States fourth in 1939 with 11 per cent.

The Icelandic state budget for 1938 with revenues at $4,385,000 and expenditures at $4,300,000, again returned a small surplus.

Stimson Seeks Law To Remove Tariff On Goods For Defense

By the Associated Press

Secretary Stimson, it was learned yesterday, has urged Congress to enact legislation permitting the Treasury to eliminate import duties on any article certified by any department or agency to be useful for national defense.

The proposal has drawn charges from opponents that it would give the Administration a free hand to eliminate tariffs at will. The measure provides that duties may be wiped out on goods imported "by or on behalf of" Government departments or agencies. Some legislators have contended that this language is broad enough to give the Treasury virtual control over the tariff structure.

Stimson supported the legislation in a letter to Chairman Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the Senate Military Committee. Made public yesterday, the communication said:

"At least in theory, the United States Government would not suffer financially by paying duty to itself on articles owned and imported for its own use, but such an arrangement is somewhat anomalous and would involve unnecessary administrative expense and delay.

"The import duty on articles and materials suitable for defense purposes is high, and if such payments must be made the quantities of defense articles and materials which may be obtained from available appropriations will necessarily be substantially reduced, without any corresponding advantage to the Government."

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, told reporters he was "emphatically opposed" to the bill and added:

"Perhaps Secretary Stimson doesn't know that to protect our American laborers and to maintain our living standards in this country we must prevent outright competition with the slave labor abroad. The only thing that stands between our living standards and those of peon labor in other countries is the tariff system."

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, declared any legislation to eliminate the duty on Argentine beef imports would have "very little" chance of passage.

CHINESE YOUTH ORGANIZATION MARCHES WITH FLAGS OF AMERICA AND CHINA

Parading Chinese Vow 'China Will Live Forever'

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

A thousand clenched fists beat the air and as many Chinese voices, hurt, shrill, angry, screamed "China will live forever" at the close of a meeting signalizing the start of China's fifth year of honorable resistance to Japan yesterday.

On the top step of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, where the meeting was held, the dragon was left to lie with its hundred angry eyes staring off through the Ninth Street and Massachusetts Avenue traffic. Some children came up wanting to finger the eyes, and an old Chinese, standing by, smiled at them until they left.

Inside the church the elder Chinese and their children had bowed three solemn times to a portrait of Generalisimo Chiang Kai-shek. While their fans made a rythm flowing across the crowd, they sat impassive through speeches, only politely applauding, until Dr. C. C. Hung, the minister of their Community Church, asked them if they stood with China.

"Do we pledge ourselves to China?" he asked and they sprang to their feet to shake affirmative fists and scream to his questions: "Down with the imperialism of Japan. . . . Resistance to the end. . . . Recover all of our territory. . . . China will live forever."

Dr. Hung, who lives at 1011 L Street Northwest and is their leader, had read a letter sent by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, saying that "we, in this war-scarred capital (Chungking) upon which the baffled Japanese airmen still wreak their vengeance, have been especially heartened by the magnificent manner in which you, our overseas compatriots, have throughout the years of stress and sorrow risen to the occasion. . . But the war is not over."

She told of the sufferings, saying that "we must not and shall not fail those who have borne the heaviest blows . . . the Generalissimo and I send you heartiest appreciation."

Security Administer Paul V. McNutt asserted that "when any nation teams up as Japan has done with this Axis threat, it can hardly do so without expecting to shoulder the full consequences of its actions. Our interest in that part of the world is far too real for us to abandon it in order to appease the political machine which now happens to be in power in Tokyo."

"And tomorrow will come victory," he said. "A victory in which China will command the Orient.

"From its great past we may be sure its sway will be an era of wisdom and sanity and justice."

America, he said, extended congratulations.

Many messages of greeting were read, including ones from the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida; Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, resident prelate of Washington area, Methodist Church; Dr. John R. Edwards, superintendent, West Washington Methodist District; Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnall (retired); William Green, of the A. F. of L., and Henry R. Luce, editor, Time Magazine.

Bill Cunningham's Column: Hugh Duffy Still Holds All-Time Mark

LOU FINNEY

By Bill Cunningham

All this pointed palaver about who propelled which baseball with what sort of quarter-staff for how many consecutive times and at what period in history affords your correspondent a golden opportunity to get up on the soap box with his hardy perennial about the greatest baseball hitter of all time.

That's right—the answer furnished by the bright-eyed gentleman in the back row with the full beard and the ear trumpet. Duffy's the name. Not the name of the respondent with the facial hay and the old gramophone horn, but the name of the super granddaddy of them all in the public and highly scientific art of popping that onion.

Hugh Duffy was the fellow. He did it 47 years ago.

Of course, the term greatest batter" could probably stand some definition. Babe Ruth exploded 'em farther and higher. Ty Cobb, like Abou Ben Adhem, led all the rest more often. But the ballplayer establishing the highest batting average of all time in a regularly constituted season of more than 100 ball games was Hugh Duffy, of the Boston Nationals in 1894. In 124 games back there 47 seasons ago, Duffy bradded a bating average of .438 into the book.

It's still there, like the flag, after 47 terrific years, despite the tempestuous assaults of all the Cobbs, the Speakers, the Hornbys and the Ruths. Wee Willie Keeler hit .432 for Baltimore in 1897, but nobody's really come close to knocking it out since. Hornsby made the most serious threat. He smacked out a .424 figure in 1924. The nearest American League challenge was a virtual tie between George Sisler and Ty Cobb. Both hit .419, Cobb' in 1911; Sisler in 1922.

A One-Man Cooperstown

So Duff's record is still around, and what makes this always a sweeter story to write, so is he. His name and his fame are no yellowed statistic exhumed from the old files with a tyographical billduke, and he is no fragile museum piece on tottering limbs with whole paragrahs of history written in the parchment of a wrinkled face.

No sir, Hugh's as spry as a cricket and as solid as a brick. He's a walking, one-man Cooperstown, almost the living last of a legendary lot. He coyly avoids any mention of the number of his years, but he was playing town team baseball 60 years ago. You can do your own figuring from that. The rest of us have to.

Duffy was a shortstop in the minors. In Chicago, Pop Anson switched him to third base, but Anson had a theroy that only big men could play baseball and Duffy, for all his 160 pounds, looked about the size of a flea. He was going along all right, but Anson scarcely ever looked at him, until Billy Sunday, later world famous as the evangelist, was sold out of right field to the Pittsburgh team. Duffy was switched to plug that gap until somebody bigger could be found. They never found that somebody. Duffy was dynamite from there on.

The whole history of baseball is tied up in his life. He spanked that .438 in 1894. The year before it, he hit .378. In fact, he was considered one of the most dangerous hitters in baseball for almost 10 years. He's known them all and can discuss them all. He can still see Tommy McCarthy, King Kelly, Jimmy Collins, Herman Long, Bobby Lowe, Al Spaulding, Ed Delehanty, Nap Lajoie and the rest of that historical company up there at the plate and can tell you where and how they differed from the hitters of today.

Finding the Right Adjective

And one thing about Hugh is that he doesn't belittle the hitters of today. He'll tell you that a lot of these modern sticksmen could have made those teams of yore, and he'll tell you which ones and why.

Hugh is a sort of coach-emeritus with the Red Sox these days. He doesn't push his way in much, but he's available if anybody wants to ask him something. Two neophytes amongst the Red Hose decided to ask him. One was an eldering utility man named Lou Finney who could field all right but couldn't hit a lick. The other was a temperamental, quivering sort of kid named Ted Williams, who, in the quiet and understanding Duffy, found something of sympathy and encouragement he couldn't get elsewhere and apparently sorely needed.

The old man took both these youngsters as his particular assignment. He studied their styles and he made some suggestions. Finney, the sub, became a roaring Red Sox regular. His savage hitting was a last-season sensation. Williams is the champion batsman of the major leagues at the moment with a better than .400 through the complete run of games.

We are inclined too often in this life, undoubtedly, to forget about the old folks, to consider their stuff outmoded and their advice a waste of time. Here's living testimony that the past can carry over in a field where you'd figure it all the other way.

TED WILLIAMS

The Duffy mark is still up there and the Duffy system of tapping 'em is still making daily history in the box scores. If you can top 'em all for 47 years, the adjective is "greatest," isn't it?

New Outdoor Furniture Is Light and Gay

White Is Popular Combined With Bright Shades

By Martha Ellyn
Post Household Editor

WASHINGTONIANS are for the most part faced with staying in the city for the summer and doing their bit for national defense. So if it it is not in the cards to trek to the seashore, a mountain retreat, or nature's other cooler spots, then it is up to them to make the most of their local resources.

Martha Ellyn.

This city has a profusion of trees, green lawns and terraced spots, and flower gardens. Love of the outdoors sends many out under weeping willows in their own backyards or on the pocket handkerchief terraces of city apartments for meals, refreshing drinks or chatting with guests.

Broad comfortable porches and terraces are becoming as much a part of the modern scheme of life as the indoor places for dining. There will be those who will consider outdoor dining an extravagance, but it is really a sane, happy way of life. You can't beat a colorful garden or fresh green foliage as a background.

Simplify Parties

Eating outdoors always results in gay camaraderisp. Everyone loves to be guests at al fresco meals. And there is a practical side to such functions as they make entertaining very simple.

Making the porch, garden or terrace inviting for the summer is a task that most households approach with zest. If they aren't zestfully wishing along these lines already, all they have to do is visit the local stores and see the interesting porch and terrace setups that are being shown. Wrought iron, rattan, bamboo, yucca, wood, sheet metal and plastic are all materials from which the new porch and terrace furniture is being made. These various kinds of furniture give the decorator a chance to restyle with new colors and new effects. And if new furniture isn't on the budget, last year's outdoor furniture may be rejuvenated with a new paint job, that will take little expenditure of money and time.

White Is Popular

The newest color combinations for wooden furniture or simple metal pieces, according to one authority, favor white with touches of Bermuda blue, Chinese yellow, lawn green or rich red. The colors are used on the arms and legs of chairs and on the rims and legs of tables. Many new gliders and chinese lounges are finished in all white with gay cushions for contrast.

Smart colors for wrought iron furniture this season are deep shell pink, light ivory and powder blue. However, the following of prevailing styles is not the only basis for color selection. Harmony with the exterior of the house should be considered also, particularly for porch furniture. The garden furniture may be far enough from the house to prevent the clashing of colors, thus permitting a wider choice.

Denim Sea Togs

Setup for Simple Entertaining

Hollywood Girls Go Streamlined, Discard Frills

Hollywood, Calif., July 6.—Hollywood girls are discarding frill and furbelow for the streamlined costume with a provocative touch or two. Brenda Marshall names these odd and unusual details "conversation touches" because they invariably provoke talk.

As a golden example of what she means, there's the glistening new ornament that Brenda is wearing in her hair. The costume complete includes a sheer white wool dinner gown with one elbow-length sleeve embroidered with an insignia of gold kid leaves regimented within a triangle like a military emblem. Her hair is arranged in a low bun, then tucked on ecah side, and behind her ears are two small clusters of matching gold kid leaves.

Others are causing talk in the same simple way. Priscilla Lane does it by wearing a sleek black crepe dress and a turban and brief cape of white jersey, copied exactly from the one Mrs. Pemberton wears in the famous miniature of Hans Holbein.

A model combination pendant and clip being worn by Alexis Smith is a little white gold cylinder set with a red ruby, white diamond and blue sapphire. Rolled up inside is the preamble to the Constitution.

Constance Bennett's newest evening frock is in white pique and simple in line. But there's a touch of mbic in the two matching tropical fish embroidered on the full skirt. They have bodies of flashing opal, which Constance matches in small pearl and opal earrings.

Woman Who Has Long Admired This Column's Stand On Moral Matters Is 'Disappointed' in Advice Given Parents, To-Wit: Don't Tell Children of Past 'Sin'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For a long time, I have read your articles frequently and always admired your stand on moral matters. But in last Friday's column (July 4) you advise a mother to tell her children what seems to me to be a deliberate falsehood. You advise her to say that her eldest child is a 7-months-old baby, when this is not the case. Surely you do not mean this. You cannot mean to advise telling a deliberate lie, can you? I am very much disappointed to see this advice coming from you, and trust I am mistaken. Sincerely,

A. B. C.

DEAR A. B. C.: Morality has to do with "excellence in what pertains to practice or conduct;" with "conforming to a standard of what is good." And the primary purpose of this column is to indicate the constructive solution of personal problems,—which, in my opinion, would be the solution conferring the greatest good upon the greatest number, and visiting injury upon none.

In the case under discussion, we are told that a man and wife have been "supremely happy" in their 14 years' marriage, to which "three fine children" have been born. But that, owing to parental opposition to the marriage, 15 years ago, "unfortunately" they surrendered to their feelings and were obliged to marry immediately,—their first child being born seven months later. In the years since, they have been altogether exemplary parents, and have (says the lady) "made good with our respective families, who love us and are proud of us."

However, she says: "We have never told the children the date of our marriage. We joke about it when they ask (which is seldom) much as we joke when they ask our age . . . And now they are reaching an age when they understand life, I want to know what to say to them when they ask how long we have been married. . . . They have every confidence in us (as we have never lied to them nor deceived them in any way), and we must keep that confidence at any cost. . . . Is there any way we can explain our mistake, without sacrificing our children's love for and faith in us"

Now (1), it is my opinion that good does not derive from morbid preoccupation with "sin,"—any more than health could derive from feeding on carrion. (2) Psychologists tell us that children are best "conditioned" to treat successfully, magnanimously and self-respectingly humanity as a whole, by associating from earliest infancy with guardians whom they have found (in reciprocal dealing) to be consistently admirable and trustworthy. (3) Since there are no perfect people, it remains for the average individual to realize his finest potentialities in some of his most prerious affectional relationships. And I deem it his inalienable privilege, as well as his surest means of "holding fast to that which is good," to consistently exemplify his best self in such relationships, without simultaneously engaging in cross-reference bookKeeping on lesser aspects of his personality.

I cannot believe that—from the ethical, moral or social view,—he is under any compulsion to carry an outline of some remote yesterday's blot forward to each succeeding day's record of his life. Today's entry should be as clean and orderly as he can make it; as free as possible from yesterday's mistakes and corrections. And it should be left thus to speak for itself. I believe there is higher morality,—of motive and conduct,—implicit in faithfully supporting another's elevating conviction of one's fundamental excellence, than would be implicit in obliging him to scrutinize the skeletal outlines of a long-since irrelevant fall from grace.

Such considerations as these shaped the reply I gave to "B. M. H." However, I did not suggest "telling a deliberate lie." On the contrary, I said: "Don't ever demean or set a trap for yourself by indulging in wholecloth falsehoods . . . Keep to the truth; but draw upon the truth, in this delicate matter, only to the extent that it serves the high purpose of giving reassurances and self-esteem to your children."

Inasmuch as the first baby was born seven months after marriage, it was a premature infant—but whether socially or physiologically is a matter of no moment to anyone save the parents. And inasmuch (as I pointed out) it is not uncommon for Providence to bless the most correctly contrived unions with "seven months' babies."—may we not mercifully rest whatever explanation the children of this family require, on the implication that the eldest belongs in the (shall we say?) more reptable classification? I think so. And I am prepared to label as a vengeful, gratuitous scandalmonger, anyone who would insist on burdening the sensitive hearts of "Three fine children," with "the whole truth and nothing but the truth" concerning such a contretemps.

M. H.

Make-up Off the Set

Hollywood, Calif.—Jane Wyman, whose next screen appearance will be in a current picture, has adopted a modified screen make-up for formal evening hours. Jane's skin has a natural tinge of ivory which takes a beautiful suntan every summer, so the deep Castilian shade of foundation and powder used for her camera make-up blends perfectly with her new complexion. She also has a hint for other foundation cream devotees. If it feels masklike after you've applied your powder, says Miss Wyman, pat the face lightly with cold water, then blot dry. And don't powder again. Cool water will not remove powder.

Protective Diet Necessary in Hot Weather

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU are trying to string along mainly on sandwiches and iced tea during the heat waves, don't blame it all on the weather because you feel as limp as a wilted lettuce leaf. A better diet will make you feel better.

Summer menus frequently fall far short of measuring up to the nutrition yardstick. The edge is off your appetite and you are not especially interested in what you eat. But while you need less fuel, you require just as many of the protective elements for the internal processes go on as usual.

So that there will be less work in preparation and also less for the digestive system, the menus should be kept simple. You don't need five-course dinners or too many foods rich in fats or proteins, which are "heating." Fresh vegetables, whole grain or enriched bread, a moderate amount of lean meat, eggs, milk, and fresh fruit in season makes a good summer diet.

Have One Hot Dish

If you are used to having hot food at each meal, it is better not to switch suddenly to all cold foods. A good rule is to always have one hot dish.

When you are feeling the heat, don't gulp down a couple of glasses of iced water or any other cold beverage. The shock to the nerves of the stomach is too great. Whether a hot beverage or a cool one is the more cooling depends on the humidity. If the air is hot and dry, it is conducive to evaporation and a hot beverage which induces perspiration proves cooling. But on the days the air is filled with moisture, a cool drink is better because body heat is used to warm the liquid in the stomach. It should be drunk slowly, however, and not gulped down.

If you work or play hard in the summer and perspire freely, you may need a bit more salt in the diet to offset that which is lost in perspiration. But if you use salt generously and do very little physical exercise, there is no reason why you should need more.

Low in Vitamins

Our summer menus are especially apt to be low in the requirements of Vitamins A and B1, and the minerals, calcium and iron. This deficiency is easily overcome by having a green vegetable every day, plus a green salad, enriched or whole grain bread, an egg, and milk—skim milk or buttermilk when you are trying to cut calories. The liberal use of fresh fruits and vegetables which are abundant at this season furnishes ample Vitamin C.

If you would like to drop a few pounds of excess fat, the following menu is low in calories but nutritionally perfect.

Daily Washing of Underwear Advised

For the sake of daintiness, underwear should be changed daily. Most of the cotton undergarments need no ironing, and the washing is simplicity itself if the fabric has not been allowed to become badly soiled. Soak the things in lukewarm suds for 20 minutes, then transfer to warm, soapy water. The lightest sort of rubbing will usually remove any soil that has not been loosened by the soaking.

Rinse thoroughly, and if possible dry in the sun. Some housewives prefer to soak the whole family's daily accumulation of underwear overnight, and to finish the washing next morning. This has the triple advantage of keeping fresh supplies on hand, avoiding disagreeable perspiration odors from the hamper, and preventing fabric deterioration.

Perfume Defeats Summer Heat

Light diet and outdoor life plus cooling perfumes, toilet waters and eau de colognes will make summer heat more bearable. Choose well your perfumes to wear with cotton accessories. Be sure they are light and cooling. The girl above selects "Chambray," a fragrance of this type to accent her chambray accessories. Others created especially for cottons are "Shantung," "Strawhat" and a new "Raspberry Ice" toilet water

How to Make Those Odd Pennies Count

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

ARE YOU tired of seeing and hearing and reading about ways to fix up the place for large luxurious sums of money? Who couldn't, you well may remark. The question before the house is how to do it on the odd pennies you can squeeze out of the budget. Well, here are some ideas—we hope you will help yourself!

Mrs. R. W. A. writes that she is making the back porch into an open terrace with a rambler rose arbor at one end, and a stone oven. But all the work is being done by family talent and there's no money for fancy furniture. Can we suggest anything?

Use Barrels For Chairs

Barrels can be made into pretty good outdoor furniture. Use one for a table base with a board top. Then cut out others for chairs, adding a seat and home-made cushions. Paint the barrels white with bright red bands and have blue calico cushions.

Mrs. L. A. writes: "I am furnishing a small place that will consist of only a studio bedroom, a kitchen and a tiny room with two closets. What furniture do you suggest? In the studio I will use a large mattress on springs with legs in place of a bed. Would a secretary and a console table be appropriate here? Would you have a regular kitchen set or a work table and chairs? We haven't much to spend."

We'd keep these rooms all informal and casual in mood. What about getting a nice maple secretary or highboy for the studio, then perhaps a low-boy or small maple chest in place of the console because of the extra drawer space they'd afford.

Inexpensive Jute Rugs

There are some inexpensive woven rugs of jute and cotton now on the market which look attractive and don't cost much. White walls, a green rug and red and white checked or plaid gingham curtains would be fresh and charming with a sturdy textural fabric for the couch cover. Add cushions in all shades of green from light to dark, with two or three red cushions in different shades. For the kitchen, is there space for a trestle table with benches? Make it a hearty genial room and plan to have kitchen parties here sometimes. The same colors we'd have here — red checked curtains, white walls, green floor. In the small room why not make a dressing room all in palest green with accents of deep green.

By Alice Brooks

WORK these colorful doilies in satin and outline stitch—single and outline stitch or cutwork. Use natural coloring for the flowers or a darker shade than the material for the entire embroidery. Pattern 7031 contains a transfer pattern of an 11x17½ inch and two 6x9 inch doilies; materials needed; illustrations of stitches.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in coin to the New York Office of the Washington Post Household Arts Dept., 259 West Fourteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Bad Grammar Stamps You As Uncultured

PITY THE POOR girl who, on arriving at her vacation hotel, makes such an English error as "Where's that bellboy AT?" She'll never win the nice friends she dreamed of winning.

It isn't hard to acquire flawless English if you check up occasionally. Why not start now?

Q. What's wrong with the following: "Where's he AT?" "I'm going TO GO," "It fell off OF the table"?

A. In every case there's an extra word added. Say "Where is he?" "I'm going," "It fell off the table."

Q. When do you use DON'T and when do you use DOESN'T?

A. Use DON'T whenevver you mean "do not"—for example "They DON'T think so." Use DOESN'T whenever you mean "does not"—"He DOESN'T think so." Never make the mistake of saying "He (or she) DON'T."

Q. Which is correct — "She AGGRAVATES me" or "She IRRITATES me"?

A. "She IRRITATES me" is right, because IRRITATE means to vex or annoy. AGGRAVATE means to add to or increase.

Other points you're doubtful about can be cleared up with our 40-page booklet, COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH. Lists mistakes and tells how to correct them. Explains right meanings of words often misused.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Common Errors in English," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your Name, Address, and the Name of booklet.

One Touch of Royalty Makes Some Heads Spin

Ladies Thrilled at Prospect of Prince They Once Met Becoming Puppet Czar

By Hope Ridings Miller

Grand Duchess Kira

"A snob," according to A. A. Milne, the noted British author, "is one who loves a lord."

Change the last word to "title-of-any-type," and you'll know right off the bat that Washington has its full share of snobs.

I was never more emphatically convinced of this fact than the other day at a small luncheon when a group of Washingtonians were discussing the widely circulated rumor that Hitler plans to elevate to the throne of Russia Prince Louis Ferdinand of the House of Hohenzollern and his wife, Grand Duchess Kira of the House of Romanoff, just as soon as the Nazis conquer Stalin's forces.

Louis Ferdinand

Of the six women present, five definitely were for all aid to Britain, short of nothing. Everyone in the group had expressed the hope that Hitler would be stopped at once by Russia; but when talk turned on the possibility that Stalin's forces might eventually be conquered, and Prince Louis Ferdinand would sit on the throne of Russia, each of those women had a sudden change of heart. And before long, every single one was glowingly reminiscing about the visit Prince Louis Ferdinand and his wife made to Washington in 1938.

"I must say he was attractive, even if he was a German," said one woman. "But, of course, he belongs to the old regime, the real Germany—not Hitler's." (He's mighty friendly with Hitler's, I thought.).

"And the Grand Duchess Kira—how perfectly charming she was," gushed another guest at the luncheon. "Of course, from one born to the purple, well, naturally, you know what to expect."

Still another guest observed that Russia might be a much more pleasant country to visit "if real royalty headed the government," and someone else pointed out that if Hitler did take over the Soviet "he couldn't pick a more engaging puppet ruler than Prince Ferdinand."

Now, long as I've been around Washington and closely as I have observed some of our leading social lights, I was slightly shocked at this line of talk. I voiced a faint objection. Wasn't it a bit premature to accept the fact that Hitler would conquer Russia? And if he did, what was the basis for belief that Prince Ferdinand would be placed on the throne? Wasn't that just another rumor?

"But, of course," was the reply from a dowager who seemed to know whereof she spoke. "Yet it's all so logical," she went on. "Kira's the daughter of Grand Duke Cyril, who would now be Czar of all Russia if there hadn't been a revolution. Then, too, you mustn't forget that she's a daughter of a British princess and the great-granddaughter of Queen Victoria."

I had remembered that; but I couldn't see where that helped if Hitler was to be the one who sat Kira and her husband on the throne. Another guest at the luncheon took up her friend's argument and sought to settle the matter once and for all.

"Well, of course," she said with a smug smile in my direction, "if you had met the charming prince and his wife, as I did, during their visit to Washington, you would have known, even then, that some day they were bound to have a throne all their own."

Royal Couple Remembered Here

At that point it hardly seemed worth while for me to mention that I had met them; that along with several dozen other Washingtonians I attended the garden party at the German Embassy back in June, 1928, and met Prince Louis Ferdinand and the Grand Duchess when they were on their honeymoon. I thought they were moderately attractive but I doubted that was any reason they would some day "have a throne all their own."

I shall never forget that garden party, however; for it was the only Washington fete for royalty in my memory when the company generally was allowed to forget that the guests of honor had titles. The prince and the grand duchess mingled informally in the throng. They talked with whomever they pleased, with or without formal introduction. They both spoke perfect English and acted as if they had lived in America for years. The grand duchess turned out to be a medium-sized woman with blonde, bobbed hair, deep blue eyes and an engaging smile. The prince looked like a very pleasant young business man, and he said, quite frankly, he liked everyone he had met in America. ("I like most everyone anyway," he said, "provided he is not a snob.")

He had been to Washington a number of times before; had traveled widely in this country, and had been employed in a Detroit automobile plant for several months in 1933. A year later, when he returned to Europe and entered an aviation school in Berlin, he was quoted as saying he hoped to qualify as a reserve aviation officer in order to serve his country. In another interview about that time, he stated that he had found American girls "to be the loveliest in the world." Pressed for a comment as to whether he ever expected to marry one, he replied, "I'll never marry against my grandfather's wishes."

Titles Still Charm Capitalites

Ferdinand's romance with Grand Duchess Kira had former Kaiser Wilhelm's full approval from its inception and, early in 1938, the two were married in no less than three ceremonies. There was a civil marriage in the Potsdam registrar's office; a religious ceremony afterward at Cecelienhof, the palace of the former German Crown Prince, the bridegroom's father, and the next day the couple went to Doorn in Holland for a German evangelical service in the presence of the former Kaiser.

Shortly afterward, they started their around-the-world trip and landed in America early in June. For Grand Duchess Kira the two-day stopover in Washington was in the nature of a homecoming, as she had spent several months here in 1929-30 under the chaperonage of Princess Burhanneddin, then Mrs. Deming Jarves.

At the German Embassy party for her and her husband, it seemed to me that a surprising number of Washingtonians were boasting of having known dear Kira very, very well when she came to the Capital the first time. The past few days, I've heard several echoes of the same sentiment. Come what may, titles are still titles.

The Chandlers Are Honored At Dance

Senator and Mrs. Albert B. Chandler, who are sojourning in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., will visit Kentucky before returning to Washington. They shared honors with Mr. and Mrs. George Allen at a dinner dance given on Saturday night by Holly Stover, of Washington, in the Hall of Governors at the Greenbrier Hotel in White Sulphur Springs.

Also at White Sulphur are Senora de Trujillo, wife of Generallissimo Trujillo who is now in the Dominican Republic, and their family. They are occupying the Hawley cottage for the season and entertained at a house party over the weekend.

Mrs. Francis S. Whitten, who is in White Sulphur for the summer, entertained at a dinner party on Friday night at Three Valleys, her place on the Alvon Road. Guest of honor at the party was Miss Carolyn Nash, who was her house guest for the holiday weekend.

Others from Washington who were in White Sulphur Springs recently include Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Harvey, of Kenwood, Md., who had as guests at their cottage L. A. Snead and Mrs. Maxwell Harvey, Mrs. Alvin Bentley, Mrs. M. J. Keane, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Spriggs, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dow, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grant Meem, Miss Lucille Jewett, Leroy Walker, Ralph H. Cole, A. M. Bentley, John A. O'Brien and Dr. John J. Clarke.

Bordens Hosts To Iran Guest

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Borden have as their guest her cousin, Mrs. Charles W. Lamb, of Tabriz, Iran. Mrs. Lamb, who has lived in Iran for 26 years, is the wife of Dr. Lamb, chief surgeon in charge of the American Hospital in Tabriz.

Mrs. Lamb was accompanied to this country by her two daughters, the Misses Caroline and Catherine Lamb, who plan to attend school here. Miss Caroline Lamb attended the School for Foreign Students at Teheran, the capital of Iran, for two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Borden expect to have their daughter, Miss Barbara Borden, with them next week. She is coming from Texas State College for Women, where she will graduate this month. Richard Borden, their son, will receive his degree from Tulane University in New Orleans this season and will return to Washington in August.

James Houghteling, Host to 'All-Yale' Party at Dinner

Entertaining at a dinner party last night James Houghteling, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling, feted about 16 members of the young set. It was an "all Yale" party so far as the boys were concerned as seven of them are here studying for foreign service exams. Following dinner at the Houghteling residence on Wyoming Avenue the guests went to the Shoreham for dancing.

Tomorrow morning Mr. and Mrs. Houghteling and their son will leave for Winnetka, Ill., where they have a home. Mr. Houghteling, sr., plans to be there for three weeks but the remainder of the family will be there all summer. Miss Peggy Houghteling has left for Mexico on a student tour and will be gone for several months.

Two Capitalites Plan Tour in Canada

Miss Margaret Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, and Miss Elizabeth Stewart-Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stewart-Richardson, will leave Thursday for Canada.

They will drive up and plan to visit at the Seignory Club and Murray Bay. They will be gone a month.

On Sunday afternoon Miss Tuckerman entertained at a cocktail party in honor of her house guests, Miss Virginia Page Lovell, of Baltimore. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Gordon Lovell. About 50 members of the young set attended the party at Tuxeden, the Tuckerman home, and many stayed on for a buffet supper.

Army Daughter to Be Wed

Underwood & Underwood

MISS PATRICIA VERNOR HENRY,

whose engagement to Capt. Edward Worthington Williams is announced by her parents, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Guy V. Henry. The bride-elect is a graduate of the Holton Arms School, class of 1936, and is a member of the Junior League. Capt. Williams is the son of the late Col. George Williams, U. S. A. He is a graduate of the United States Military Academy and is now on duty at Fort Myer, Va., and as an aide at the White House. The wedding will take place in the autumn

Dinners Precede First Chamber Concert Tonight

A number of dinners will precede tonight's Starlight Chamber Music concert to be given in Meridian Hill Park. This open-air performance will start the summer series of chamber music events. Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who has been active in the concert, will be among the dinner hostesses as will Mrs. Rudolph Stanley Brown and Miss Grace Dunham Guest. Following dinner they will take their guests to the musicale.

On the committee sponsoring the series are Mrs. Nin Collier, Miss Grace Dunham Guest, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown, Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whittall, Miss Harriet P. Winslow, Mrs. Arthur Woods, Mrs. Stanley Woodward, and Mrs. Helen Ware Cappel, Librarian of Congress Archibald MacLeish, Clarence Aspinwall. Dr. George F. Bowerman, E. K. Cappel, and Horace Peaslee, architect of the park, will provide the setting for these chamber music concerts under the stars.

Davenport Browns On Bridal Tour

Mr. and Mrs. Davenport Brown, jr., are on their wedding trip in Cape May, N. J., and upon their return will live in Virginia. The bride, who was married on June 28, is the former Miss Penelope Anne Freer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Ray Freer, who came from Pasadena, Calif., for the ceremony. Mr. Brown is the son of Commander and Mrs. Davenport Brown, of this city. The wedding took place at 2 East Melrose Lane, Chevy Chase, at the home of the bridegroom's aunt, Miss Margaret Merrick.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown trimmed with heirloom lace that belonged to her great-grandmother. She wore a lace veil and carried a shower bouquet of sweetpeas and gardenias.

Miss Mary Emily Pettengill, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was maid of honor. She wore a pale blue organdy gown with a bouffant skirt. Her bouquet was of pink roses and blue delphinium. Miss Kate Chaplin, cousin of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. She wore a pale pink frock. Ramsay Brown served as best man for his brother. A reception followed the ceremony.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, who are touring the West, have left Estes Park in Colorado and are en route to Colorado Springs. Mr. Chapman plans to return here the middle of the month but Mrs. Chapman will remain in the West longer.

The Second Secretary of the Peruvian Embassy and Senora de Mackehenie y de la Fuente returned yesterday from New York, where they visited her parents, Senor and Senora Miro-Quesada at the Waldorf-Astoria. Senora de Mackehenie will leave the latter part of the week to join her parents who plan to come to Washington shortly.

Mrs. William E. Borah, widow of Senator Borah, returned yesterday to her apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue. She spent the holiday at Hotel Traymore in Atlantic City.

Mrs. A. Manuel Fox and her son, Melvin Fox, have left for Mexico City, where they plan to visit for six weeks. Mr. Fox is in Chungking, China, where he is the American member of the Chinese stabilization fund committee.

Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor will leave this morning for their home in Baddeck, Nova Scotia. They will be joined by various other members of the family during this month and August.

Mrs. Waggaman Pulver entertained at a small cocktail party yesterday at her home in Georgetown.

Mr. and Mrs. Brien McMahon have returned to their home in Kenwood, Md., after a short vacation at Rehoboth Beach, Del.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. John F. Greenslade and their daughter, Miss Rosemary Greenslade spent the weekend at the Skytop Club in Skytop, Pa. Miss Greenslade plans to remain at the club until August and will be joined by her parents on weekends.

Mrs. Jerome Wilber has left for Nahant, Mass., where she plans to remain until September.

Mrs. Estelle Nordlinger has returned to her apartment at Woodley Park Towers after an extended stay in Evansville, Ind. She has as her guests her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Marks, and their young son, Kenneth, of Evansville.

Mrs. Abram Simon has left for Swampscott, Mass., where she will spend the summer at the Preston Hotel.

Miss Mount Fetes Mrs. Emil Scram

Miss Marie Mount entertained at a farewell luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. Emil Schram who will leave Saturday with her family for New York City where they will make their home. Mr. Schram has been named head of the New York Stock Exchange.

The party, which was given at Olney Inn, included Mrs. Arthur Bergman, Mrs. Aileen Evanson, Mrs. Tony Wakeman, Mrs. Mahlin Kirk, Mrs. Douglas Whitlock, Mrs. Miniear Hostettler, Mrs. Thomas L. Stokes, Mrs. Douglas Hatch, Mrs. Addison Foster, Mrs. Mackenzie Stevens, Mrs. Francis Nevins, Mrs. Mark Welsh, Miss Martha Ellyn Slayback and Miss Jane Joyce.

Justice and Mrs. Black Spent Weekend at Shore

Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black were among those from Washington who spent the holiday weekend in Atlantic City. Senator Alben W. Barkley, who spent about ten days there with Mrs. Barkley, has returned to his desk on Capitol Hill.

Others who were in the seashore resort were Senator Tom Connally, Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill, Senator and Mrs. William M. Smathers, Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Morris Sheppard and Mrs. Frank P. Lockhart, of Texas, wife of the American Consul General in Shanghai.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MR. AND MRS. Houston Thompson will combine a vacation in Canada with a next-to-last look, for some time to come, at their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Farr Simmons, who has been named Counselor at our Embassy in Rio de Janeiro, will stop off in Washington en route to his post from Ottawa, where he served in the same capacity at the American Legation.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, who only recently returned from Colorado, will leave later this month for Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons and their two young children are coming here August 15 for two weeks before sailing for Rio. Visiting Jack and Caroline Simmons over the Fourth were Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith of Washington. Mrs. Jefferson Patterson will also go on from Maine to Canada for a stay there before returning to Berlin, where her husband is First Secretary of our Embassy. Mrs. Patterson, when she was Marvin Breckinridge, visited in Ottawa and made a great success with her movies of the Frontier Nursing Service, in which Lady Tweedsmuir, whose late husband was Governor General, was particularly interested.

A MOVIE FAN who was introduced to Douglas Fairbanks at his recent broadcast on South Africa, said before it even began, "I want to leave at once so I can tell all my friends I've met him." Mr. Fairbanks confessed he felt a bot nervous before the mike, but he didn't show it. He wore a red carnation in his buttonhole and also a small American flag pinned to his lapel. The well known actor will make one more picture before entering naval service—he is in the Navy Reserve.

THE DIGNIFIED routine of the State Department is being constantly interrupted these days by returned travelers with exciting tales to tell. A group of Foreign Service officers came in the other day with stories of picking up a shipwrecked group of Dutchmen on their way back from Europe. They say that one of the castaways, when their ship approached, stood up and shouted, "Will you take us aboard, please?" as calmly and politely as though he were asking for a cigarette. Among those in the diplomatic group was Donald Heath, who for several years has been attached to the American Embassy in Berlin.

If you've noticed a long, sleek foreign car around the streets of Washington, it is probably the one that Myles Standish brought back with him from France. His own was lost somehow in the confusion and he purchased a Talbot just before leaving. Mr. Standish was stationed at Marseille, where the consulate is a mad house as all Europe jams the doors to get a visa to enter this country.

Mrs. Standish was in France throughout the fighting and is now in Washington with her husband. While they were waiting passage in Lisbon, they ran into Dorsey Fisher, of Washington, who was trying to get aboard a plane for London, his new post.

Another recent arrival is W. Perry George, who has been stationed in Barcelona. Mr. George is an outstanding authority on wines, and once wrote a book about them which was translated into several languages and distributed at the New York World's Fair. He is now about to write one on the domestic variety. Mrs. George has been in Washington for several months, one of the State Department "war widows."

MRS. JOHN CARTER VINCENT and Miss Maxine Davis are a rare pair who not only talk long-ingly of buying a farm, but have actually gone out and done it. They have purchased several acres in Virginia, where there are two houses, one for each. Mrs. Vincent, whose husband is Consul General in Shanghai, will return from California next fall with her two children to live on the farm until her husband's return. She has just gone back West after a visit with Miss Davis at the latter's house in Georgetown.

Sangers Expect To Open Tennis Tourney Shortly

The tennis tournaments—which Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger organize annually—will start very shortly. After several weeks of playing the finals are finished off on the Westmoreland Hills court of the Sangers with a large cocktail party arranged to watch the fun. The party, which usually falls on Mr. Sangers birthday, will probably be given on July 22.

Mrs. Sanger plans to leave late this month for the West, with a stop at Yellowstone Park on her itinerary. With Mr. Sanger she returned yesterday from a weekend trip to upper New York State, where they visited his parents over the holiday.

Boothbys to Attend Wedding in Maine

Mr. and Mrs. Everett J. Boothby, of Kenwood, Md., will leave today for Kennebunkport, Me., to attend the wedding of Mr. Boothby's sister, Miss Ruth Boothby. Miss Boothby, who will be given in marriage by her brother, will marry William Martin, of Winchester, Mass.

From there, Mr. and Mrs. Boothby will go on to their summer home in West Southport, Me. They plan to return to Washington July 24 at which time Mrs. Boothby will again take up her duties as Roll Call Chairman of the Montgomery County chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mrs. Wright Will Visit Her Daughter At Guantanamo

Mrs. Charles J. Wright will leave on July 13 for the naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Mrs. Wright will visit her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. Robert D. Heinl, jr., U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Heinl who have been stationed there for several months.

Mrs. Wright will take the train to Florida and from Miami will board a boat for Cuba. She plans to be with her daughter for two months. Mrs. Heinl was the former Miss Nancy Wright of this city.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

Mrs. P. C. Ellett, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, has had less time in the past week to be her official self. Her son, Bill, a student at the University of Maryland, broke his leg in a soft ball game last week, and the accident interrupted tasks which both he and she had undertaken that very day.

Mrs. Ellett had begun helping in a Daily Vacation Bible School in her community, and now that her son is getting along so well, she will go back to it this week. He had worked only one day at his summer job with a jeweler, when he had the accident in a B. Y. P. U. League game in which he was playing for Petworth Baptist Church. He was running from third base to home and just as he tried to step on the base, he collided with the catcher in such a way that his leg snapped.

P.-T. A. WORKERS—Numerous P.-T. A. leaders are taking part in the United Service Organizations drive for funds for service men's recreational facilities. In the Columbia Heights section, for example, Mrs. C. D. Lowe, former president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. Edward R. Seal, Mrs. A. S. Mangene and Mrs. Pauline Cissell are among the area leaders obtaining workers for the fund-raising.

Indicative of the interest in the drive, Mrs. Seal said one of the workers in her group is a man who is retired and past 70, but who wished to canvass several blocks.

One woman whom Mrs. Seal asked to serve agreed to do so for one specific reason. A friend of hers had picked up a hitchhiking selectee, who was so homesick that his story was sufficient to produce at least one ardent worker for USO.

WOMEN WHO ACHIEVE—Mrs. Seal is busy these days, collaborating with her friends, J. Jeune Carter, on a radio program about "Women Who Achieve." Mrs. Mary E. Cunningham, mother of Bill Cunningham, Post columnist, will appear on the program over WWDC at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow. This will be the ninth program in the series, which has included interviews with Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken of the Woman's Bureau, Metropolitan Police, and Mrs. John R. Murdock, wife of Representative Murdock, of Arizona.

City Club to Hear Of Red Cross Work

Volunteer services of the Red Cross will be explained to members of the Women's City Club at its meeting at 8 p. m., July 17, at the clubhouse, with Mrs. H. L. Richardson, its Red Cross chairman, in charge. A speaker will be supplied by Red Cross headquarters.

Mrs. Richardson herself participates in two of the services—production and hospital and recreation. The other services are staff assistant, Braille, administration, canteen, motor corps, nurses' aid and home service.

The 20 members of the Red Cross division of the Women's City Club for 13 months have been devoting their Mondays from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. to sewing at the District of Columbia Red Cross Chapterhouse.

Mrs. Howorth to Speak

Mrs. Lucy Somerville Howorth, of the Washington Business and Professional Women's Club, will speak to new girl defense workers at 8 tonight at the Y. W. C. A. on "Making Good in a New Home Town." This is the second lecture in a series planned by the Business and Professional Girls' Department of the Y. W. C. A. to help the newcomers in their adjustment to Washington.

Catholic Daughters Meet

Crisis Offers Opportunity For Women, C.D.A. Told

By Lucia Giddens

"No national crisis in our history has presented greater opportunities to women . . . They are counted by the thousands in the great migration of defense workers and by the millions in the growing army of our citizens pledged to contribute special civilian services in the emergency," the Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Ready told the Catholic Daughters of America at the banquet of their national convention last night.

Msgr. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, speaking on the program at the Mayflower Hotel, said:

"The women's division of the National Catholic Community Service calls on Catholic women to cooperate in the program set up to guard the religious and social interests of the soldiers, sailors and defense workers," under the United Service Organizations plan.

"Some bright statistician figured out that there are 62 different categories of service in which women can help that program.

"In just one division of possible service, that listed as 'cultural,' I noticed these opportunities for women who wish to volunteer to help the service club staff carry out its program: dramatics, music, hobbies, discussion groups on citizenship, consumer interests, vocations, personality development.

"Women who volunteer to cooperate with the work in industrial areas will be asked to interest themselves in housing projects for girls and women particularly," he said.

Cites Rapid Growth Of Industrial Town

Msgr. Ready pointed out that the National Catholic Community Service is joining with "the great agencies of other religious groups" in the United Service Organizations "to foster and protect the morale of our citizens whether of the armed forces or in the industrial centers of the Nation."

As an example of the urgency of this work, he said: "A town which six months ago had a population of 752 people all of a sudden finds itself with a large munitions and bag-loading plant. Today there are 17,000 workers trying to live in this community. Approximately 6,000 of these workers are girls and young women. It is fantastic to observe the way these people live in trailers, covered-over trucks, rough barracks, tourist-camp shacks and all manner of improvised shelters.

"I said to a cab driver taking me around, 'Where do these young people go for recreation?' 'Well,' he drawled, 'there are two pool halls and a picture theater that will take care of a couple hundred.' 'But the girls do not go to pool halls, do they?' I asked. 'Well,' he answered doubtfully, 'they didn't use to.'"

Msgr. Ready said that the Catholics in their part of the morale program must look beyond the present emergency and prepare young people "equipped to weave into the social fabric of their day standards of truth, justice and charity."

The banquet preceded the opening of the nineteenth biennial national convention of the Catholic Daughters of America at 3 p. m. today.

Bishop of Erie One of Speakers

Francis P. Matthews, supreme knight, Knights of Columbus, and the Most Rev. John Mark Gannon, D. D., Bishop of Erie, State chaplain of the Pennsylvania Catholic Daughters of America, were among the other speakers invited to appear on the banquet program.

Miss Mary C. Duffy, of South Orange, N. J., supreme regent, responded to greetings by several speakers and to the address of welcome by Miss Augusta E. Uhl, national convention chairman and territorial deputy, District of Columbia.

Peace, national defense and the intensification of its youth program will be among the chief themes for discussion at the convention which will extend through Thursday. A registration of 1,000 is expected.

"Catholic Daughters of America in National Defense" will be discussed by Miss Agnes F. Duffy, of New Jersey, at the evening session tomorrow. "Social Welfare—Its Purpose and Needs in National Defense" will be the theme for a panel discussion at 2 p. m. tomorrow, with Miss Mary McKeogh, national social welfare chairman, presiding.

A "peace luncheon" at 12:30 p. m. today will bring addresses by Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, and Dr. John K. Cartwright, chaplain of the Court District of Columbia, Catholic Daughters of America.

Solemn pontifical mass will be held at 9 a. m. today in St. Matthew's Cathedral, with the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, D. D., apostolic delegate to the United States as celebrant. The sermon will be by the Most Rev. William J. Hafey, D. D., of Scranton, Pa., national chaplain of the organization.

Soroptimist Clubs To Welcome Chief

Mrs. Jean Bennett, of Washington, president of the American Federation of Soroptimists Clubs, will be honored with a "welcome home" banquet here July 19 by representatives of the North and South Atlantic regions.

Mrs. Jennett will report on her two months' tour of the United States and Canada, during which she visited more than a score of clubs. The banquet will be held at 7 p. m., at the Washington Hotel.

Miss Mary Bourke is chairman of the committee for the banquet, which is expected to gather between 80 and 100 Soroptimists Club members of the District and five other States in these regions.

Mrs. Loraine Leese Good, president of the local club, will preside.

Women Discuss Craft Classes In Chevy Chase

Admittance of men to evening craft classes next fall and addition of courses in woodcarving and cloisonne are xpected to be among the plans discussed by the arts section committee of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase at a meeting this week.

Large tea services of silver-plated copper in the homes of several members of the club bear witness to the activity of the crafts section. Mrs. Miles C. Trowbridge, chairman of the arts section of which crafts form a part, is directing the work at the clubhouse every Thursday from 9:30 to 4, assisted by Mrs. Clarence Dawson, treasurer of the section.

Olaf Saugstad instructs the 27 women registered in working with silver, copper, pewter and semiprecious stones, and will add his specialty, woodcarving, next fall.

Besides jewelry and metal ware, the amateur craftswomen also work with pottery which, when small enough, they fire in their experimental kiln before glazing. Larger pieces have to be fired elsewhere.

The arts section committee meeting will consist of Mrs. Trowbridge, chairman; Mrs. Charles Strode, assistant leader; Mrs. Jean Hawley, secretary; Mrs. Dawson, treasurer; Mrs. James H. Underwood, publicity; Mrs. Robert Roudabush, librarian; Mrs. Harry Burton Leary, jr., and Mrs. Robert F. Griggs.

The crafts section usually meets twice a week, but their time has been curtailed due to the expanding Red Cross activities of the club.

Zonta to Hear Talk On Food, Defense

"The Place of Nutrition in National Defense" will be discussed by Dr. Helen S. Mitchell, director of nutrition on the staff of the Coordinator of Health, Welfare and Related Defense Activities, at the meeting of the Zonta Club at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the Y. W. C. A.

Dr. Mitchell, who was with the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, before going to the defense office, is on leave from Massachusetts State College where she is a research professor in nutrition.

Children of Liberty Will Install Officers

Hope Council, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, will hold a public installation of officers tonight with Mrs. Ella Burnley, deputy State councilor, as the installing officer.

The meeting will be held at Naval Lodge Hall, Fourth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, at 8:30.

At a recent council meeting, plans were completed for a picnic at Glen Echo July 19. State Councilor Mrs. G. Neal Carney; the national representative, Mrs. Elizabeth Shepherd, and State general chairman, Henry M. Gray, are among those who will attend.

A. A. U. W. Gives Tea

Miss H. May Johnson, assisted by Miss Mary Kelly, Miss Kate D. Bucknam and Mrs. Riehl Arnold, was hostess yesterday when the American Association of University Women held its weekly tea at the clubhouse. Mrs. Marian Bullock gave a program of violin music, accompanied by Miss Kelly.

C. I. O. Factional Feud Flares At Parley Here on Labor Bills

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A conference of 200 C. I. O. union officials to discuss labor legislation now pending in Congress developed yesterday into a furious factional debate, in which a scorching denunciation of the New Deal by John L. Lewis was met with charges that the mine workers' president was "playing politics."

The angry controversy followed a speech by Lewis in which he was reported to have blasted the Administration for favoring legislation deemed to be repressive to labor's rights. In his address, Lewis pointedly referred to Sidney Hillman, president of the C. I. O. Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union and associate director general of the OPM.

Lewis accused Hillman of responsibility for sending troops to break the North American Aviation Co. strike last month in Inglewood, Calif., and said he had the word of the Secretary of Labor that Hillman asked that the recently settled soft coal strike be certified to the Defense Mediation Board.

"Innuendoes" Resented

In this connection, Lewis was said to have declared that his own union, the United Mine Workers, opposed "any" enemies of labor.

Amalgamated officers interpreted Lewis' speech as a repetition of an invitation made by Lewis at the C. I. O. convention in Atlantic City in November for the Amalgamated to leave the C. I. O. Led by Jacob Petofsky, union secretary, Amalgamated officers declared they were "tired" of being brought to conferences and asked to get out of the organization.

Petofsky was reported to have defended the New Deal and President Roosevelt as labor's greatest friends and benefactors and to have expressed resentment at Lewis' "innuendoes." He is said to have charged that Lewis' speech was motivated by personal and political reasons.

Although newsmen were not admitted to the proceedings, they could hear the sound of angry voices in the United Mine Workers Building, scene of the conferences.

Flare-Up of Old Feud

The debate represented a new flare-up of a smoldering intra-C. I. O. controversy dating from Lewis' indorsement of Wendell Willkie in the 1940 Presidential campaign, which split C. I. O. ranks into pro and anti-Administration forces.

In another flare-up yesterday, Richard T. Frankensteen, United Auto Workers aviation director, denounced Communists and saboteurs in the North American Aviation strike and inferentially accused the Lewis forces of interjecting themselves unwarrantedly into the dispute. Frankensteen was brought up sharply on a point of order by A. D. Lewis, brother of the mine workers' president.

The conference was unanimous, however, in adopting resolutions condemning a series of labor bills now pending in Congress which were characterized as "repressive," and "aimed at eliminating the right to strike, imposing compulsory arbitration and generally to frustrate organizing efforts among the unorganized workers."

"Severely condemned" by name were the May and Connally bills, the Vinson bill and the Ball bill.

Spokesmen said the conference unanimously adopted a report to John T. Jones, C. I. O., legislative representative and director of labor's non-partisan league, which was largely given over to linking the Administration to the pending legislation complained of.

Jones wrote, "I am compelled to emphasize the significance of the attitude of the majority leadership in both the Senate and the House. The attitude of the Democratic leadership to these measures included actual promotion of certain antilabor measures and unspoken but clearly implied support of certain other measures."

Jones specifically accused House Majority Leader McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Acting Majority Leader Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, and Democratic Porty Whip Hill of Alabama.

Secretary Perkins Asked to Reinstate Dismissed Employe

After branding the suspension of Helen Miller, Labor Department adjustment director, as a "travesty upon justice," the Washington Industrial Union Council last night called upon Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins immediately to reinstate the employe.

Miss Perkins also was asked "to grant a fair and open hearing before an impartial board with adequate opportunity for examination of evidence and for cross-examination of witnesses."

Pointing out that Miss Miller was suspended from her job last Thursday "on the basis of charges of alleged communism," the council's resolution described her as an "outstanding trade union leader in the District of Columbia."

Accusing Miss Perkins of dismissing Miss Miller without a fair hearing, Cecil Owen, council president, commented: "The Commerce and Agriculture Departments properly work for the interests of business and agriculture. How about the Labor Department?"

Jackson's Nomination Is Confirmed

The Senate yesterday by an overwhelming voice vote confirmed the nomination of Attorney General Robert H. Jackson to be an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

A single "no" was shouted by Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, who fought confirmation in committee and on the floor.

In a Senate speech before the vote, Tydings charged Jackson was "unfit for judicial office." Specifically, he accused the Attorney General of refusing to prosecute Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, Washington columnists, for alleged criminal libel against the Senator in a 1939 broadcast.

Last 3 Appointees Approved

Confirmation of Jackson's nomination completed Senate approval of the President's last three appointments to the Supreme Court—Chief Justice Stone, Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Jackson. The Chief Justice already has taken his oath.

Senator Byrnes, serving as acting Senate leader during the recent illness of Senator Barkley, is expected to take his Supreme Court oath at the White House today after forwarding his resignation to Gov. Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina. Friends bade him farewell at a luncheon yesterday in the Senate secretary's chambers.

Senator Tydings on the floor of the Senate yesterday charged Jackson refused to prosecute Pearson and Allen for criminal libel after they broadcast over the radio two years ago that Tydings obtained construction at WPA expense of a road and a yacht basin on his private estate.

"Jackson had no more authority to set aside this (District criminal libel) law than he would to waive the laws governing larceny or murder or rape," Tydings told the Senate.

Burton Rises

"You may vote for Robert Jackson, but I put it on your word of honor, I put it on your conscience, I put it on your manhood, is there one man in this body who would condone the conduct of the Attorney General? If so, let him rise."

There was complete silence in the chamber, but sometime later Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, a member of the Judiciary Committee, rose to say it was the Attorney General's duty to decide which cases to prosecute and he thought his conduct had been proper.

Still later, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Montana, said that while members of the committee felt Tydings had grounds for resentment, they did not think the truth or falsity of the Pearson and Allen charges were questions for the Senate to decide.

Tydings charged Jackson blocked prosecution of the libel charges after ordering an FBI investigation which established the Pearson and Allen statement as groundless.

Another Step Toward War, Says Gen. Wood

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—Gen. Robert E. Wood, national chairman of the America First Committee, said tonight that occupation of Iceland by American naval forces "can be considered as another step to edge us into the war."

In a speech prepared for delivery over the Mutual Broadcasting System, he asserted that the American people were united in a determination to defend the Western Hemisphere, but added:

"If hemisphere defense involves the seizing of the Azores, the Cape Verde Islands, Dakar, or Iceland, as has just been announced, there would be no unity, for this seizure can be considered as another step to edge us into the war, not for defense."

He said he believed that conquest of the Western Hemisphere was not on the Nazi agenda and that the United States could compete economically even if Europe and Asia were dominated by Germany and Japan.

Annenberg Petition For Parole Is Denied

The Board of Parole of the Department of Justice denied yesterday an application for parole by M. L. Annenberg, publisher, now serving a three-year prison term for income tax evasions.

The publisher and operator of the now discontinued Racing News wire service began his sentence on July 22, 1940. He will be eligible for release on November 11, 1942, if he wins full credit for good behavior. He is serving his term in the Lewisburg (Pa.) Penitentiary.

Choice of Senate Finance Head Awaits Passage of Tax Bill

Postponement of selection of a chairman of the important Senate Finance Committee until after Senate passage of the defense tax bill next month was reliably indicated yesterday.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, will continue as acting chairman of the Finance Committee, it was said.

Leaders said no decisions have been reached on the post left vacant by the late Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, but indications pointed to George ultimately relinquishing his Foreign Relations chairmanship to become permanent chairman of the Finance Committee. In that connection, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas was prominently mentioned to succeed George as Foreign Relations chairman.

None of the shifts was scheduled to occur until Senate action on the tax bill probably in mid-August. House leaders meanwhile were considering a month's recess by the House while the Senate is working on the tax bill. The House Ways and Means Committee is expected to report out its completed draft of the $3,503,400,000 revenue-for-defense measure.

Milk for Needy Up to Wickard

grams until the price issue is settled.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, has applied for penny half-pints for pupils of 39 elementary schools in low income neighborhoods. The milk would be bought from District funds, with the aid of a SMA subsidy.

Conrad Van Hyning, acting welfare director, meantime has urged the Surplus Marketing Administration to liberalize its eligibility rules for 5-cent quarts so that they may be bought by subsistence-salaried WPA workers and beneficiaries of private charity.

Since both of these projects can be undertaken only with Federal assistance and an increase in the producer price for Class 1 milk would mean larger subsidies would be necessary, the SMA is expected to reserve its decisions until the price situation is cleared up.

David Miller, surplus commodity director in the District Department of Public Welfare, declared yesterday hsi office is being swamped with applications for 5-cent milk cards. These are coming from many of the people cut off from WPA this month, the divorcement making them eligible for low-cost milk.

Flag Nazis Seized Was Boy Scouts', Oumansky Reports

By the Associated Press

Constantine Oumansky, the Russian Ambassador, charged yesterday that Germany had used a Soviet Boy Scout flag to give the impression that she had captured a big Russian troop unit.

He told reporters during a State Department visit that a photograph released by the Nazis and showing German soldiers holding what was said to be a Russian war banner, depicted in reality the emblem of the Young Pioneers which he described as the Russian Boy Scouts. He exhibited a tie clasp belonging to his young daughter, a Girl Scout, and said the insignia on it corresponded to that on the flag.

Oumansky called on Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, for further discussions regarding Soviet purchase of war supplies in this country. He would not mention specific items, but said the conversations had reached the stage where concrete and practical proposals were involved.

McCarran Calls Meeting Friday On D. C. Suffrage

District suffrage legislation, held back for several weeks by the pressure of National affairs, moved forward in the Senate yesterday when Pat McCarran, chairman of the subcommittee that conducted extended hearings on the vote, summoned that body to a meeting at 10:30 a. m. Friday.

Together with notices of the meeting, McCarran distributed to subcommittee members summaries of all testimony taken by him during hearings on the Capper-Suners resolution. Accompanying the summaries were printed copies of all the full hearings.

In a statement, McCarran praised to Dr. Meyer Jacobstein and Dr. Laurence F. Schmeckebier, Brookings Institution experts, for assistance given the subcommittee during hearings.

"In presenting this summary," McCarran stated, "the chairman . . . neither submits or infers a conclusion as to what should be the decision of Congress."

The resolution proposes to amend the Constitution to give the Congress the authority to grant Washington self-government and the right to vote for President and Vice President.

Navy Plane With 7 Lost On Sea Patrol

The Navy announced yesterday that an airplane of the Atlantic patrol had been missing since Thursday with two officers and five enlisted men aboard.

The plane, a PBY-5 patrol bomber, was on "a routine patrol flight off the Northeastern coast of the United States" when last contacted Thursday afternoon, the Navy Department said. Its last approximate position for the base from which it was operating was not disclosed.

Since then, an extensive search has been conducted by ships and planes of the Atlantic fleet, the Navy said. The search is continuing.

Ensign Robert H. McKown, whose home is in Atlanta, was pilot of the plane, while the co-pilot was Ensign Joseph C. Haskell, of Charleston, S. C. Both were Naval Reservists.

Enlisted men aboard were named as follows:

Lynton Melmus England, 32, aviation machinist's mate, first class, of Long Beach, Calif.

Claude Andrew Ashley, 34, radioman, first class, of Lillington, N. C.

Lynn Elliott Dunlap, 20, radioman, third class, of Mountain, Wis.

Anthony Henry Gazafy, 28, aviation machinist's mate, third class, of Milwaukee, Wis.

Gazafy became 28 on July 3 so that the disappearance of the plane occurred on his birthday.

7 Industrial Home Runaways Hunted

Washington police are seeking seven boys from the Industrial Home School on Wisconsin Avenue who escaped yesterday morning according to D. F. Ahern, school superintendent.

The boys' ages range between 10 and 15, and they had been sent to the school for juvenile offenses. Ahern said that the boys had apparently become homesick after a parents' day party on Sunday and had simply wandered off. No strict guard is kept on the boys, he said.

If Your Backyard Attracts Children, It May Win Prize

At last we're going to find out if the grass is greener in the other fellow's yard. And if it is, he's going to get a prize.

The Community Center and Playgrounds Department is sponsoring a contest open to everybody in the District of Columbia. The only qualification for contestants is that they must have a back yard.

Fourteen prizes will be given to persons having the most attractive yards for children to play in. The department's theory is that the better the yard to play in, the less chance that children will play in the street. Separate prizes will be offered for home-made yard equipment.

The contest will be open until August 1, and winners will be announced the following week.

Laundry Walkouts Fail to Come Off

None of the city-wide laundry walkouts, threatened Sunday night by the Cleaners and Laundry workers union, materialized yesterday as the sixth day of the Arcade-Sunshine strike passed without further complaints of violence from the company.

Meanwhile, a conference with the National Labor Relations Board will be held in Baltimore today to discuss a complaint of unfair labor practices filed against the Arcade-Sunshine company by the union last month.

Fairfax Man Dies Of Auto Injuries

Buford Raines, 36, of Merryfield, Fairfax County, Va., died yesterday at Fredericksburg (Va.) Hospital from injuries suffered Friday night in a truck-auto crash on Route No. 1, 17 miles north of Fredericksburg.

Many Protest Joint Returns On Income Taxes

The projected requirement of the 1941 tax bill that all married couples file joint income tax returns has aroused so many protests, it was learned yesterday, that some members of the House Ways and Means Committee are considering moves to reopen the tentatively approved schedules to find a substitute for this contemplated source of increased revenue.

However, the protests, although raising in some quarters doubts as to the constitutionality of this proposed revision in the tax system, already have encountered strong obstacles within the committee.

Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the committee, indicated last night that he was not surprised about the protests, but he said that if the committee wants to eliminate the joint-return provision, it would be up to somebody to provide other means of raising the contemplated $300,000,000 additional revenue.

Take It Out On the Pigs!

London, July 7 (AP).—Lady Diana Duff Cooper, wife of Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, was fined 25 shillings ($5) at Bognor Regis, Sussex, for parking her car on the wrong side of the road and driving without a license. She explained she was unable to park properly because she couldn't back up with the trailer in which she was "collecting swill for pigs."

He Who Hesitates . . .

Silence may be golden, but it cost one man in Police Court folding money yesterday. Judge George Neilson asked the man charged with drunkeness if he had anything to say. He opened his mouth but couldn't find the words. "Ten dollars," droned the judge.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

U. S. to Hire Million New Employes by 1942

A million employes placed on the Federal payroll within two years! That appears to be the incredible record Uncle Sam will set in the two-year period from July 1, 1940 to July 1, 1942. The first year of that period is now history and the record, not yet tabulated, indicates that well over half a million placements were made in the Federal service during that time. In fact, in the War and Navy departments alone something like 475,000 placements have been made since the preparedness program swung into action. It's estimated that in all agencies—another half a million at least will be placed during the 1942 fiscal year that started July 1.

The million new employes doesn't mean that there has been and will be a million new jobs. Approximately 650,000 have been and will be new jobs created by the defense program. The remaining 350,000 have been and will be a turnover in the 1,300,000 Federal jobs, a figure that will rocket to something like 1,600,000 before July 1, 1942.

It's now estimated that a minimum of 3,500,000 persons will be examined by the Civil Service Commission for Federal jobs during the 1942 fiscal year. About one out of every 40 examined will get a job. The commission recently made a survey of the turnover among Federal employes. It found one defense agency where its turnover on an annual basis was the amazing figure of 83 per cent. The average turnover now is running 20 per cent, which is much higher than normal. It's caused mainly by men being called to the armed forces and people quitting the Government for better jobs elsewhere.

A record number of Civil Service tests unquestionably will have to be given within the next few months to round up a sufficient number of qualified persons to work for the Government. A survey of the commission's registers revealed that most active rolls were low, or had an inadequate supply of eligibles on them. The following registers are classified as low: all stenographer and typist registers, alphabetical card punch operator, male junior file clerk, male under file clerk, junior and under tabulating machine operator, mimeograph operator, alphabetical accounting machine operator, accounting and auditing assistant, construction cost auditor, and administrative analyst.

Also in "low" condition are aeronautical engineer, junior civil engineer, associate marine engineer, assistant marine engineer, associate naval architect, assistant naval architect, all grades of ships draftsman, all grades of structural draftsman, meterologist, radio operator, multilith operator, and junior mechanical engineer. In "fair" condition are registers for messenger, junior chemist, personnel technician and junior professional assistant. Registers in good condition, or those that have a large proportion of eligibles are those for bricklayer, carpenter, electrician female under file clerk and female junior file clerk.

The following tests are open and applications will be accepted until further notice —which will probably be at the end of the emergency: stenographer and typist, alphabetic card punch operator, tabulating machine operator, junior mechanical engineer, assistant mechanical engineer, structural draftsman, ships engineering draftsman, junior civil engineer, naval architect, marine engineer, aeronautical engineer, multilith operator, radio operator, and meteorologist.

The average salary paid to employes at the Office of Government Reports is on the upgrade. Representative Taber said it was $1,750 in 1940; $1,850 in 1941, and about $1,950 in 1942. . . . Judges of Federal courts are allowed $10 per diem while they are away from home. Non-salaried members of the Defense Mediation Board are given up to $25 per diem and dollar-a-year men get $10. Ordinary Federal workers get $5. . . . The Office of the Bituminous Coal Consumers' Counsel is hiring employes and Senator Guffey's recommendation means plenty.

Area Traffic Injures 14, 3 Seriously

Truck Collision On D. C. Street Hurts One Driver, Boy Bystander

Fourteen persons were injured, yesterday, three seriously, in traffic accidents in the Washington area.

A collision between two trucks at Third and K Streets Southwest, overturned one of the trucks, pinning the driver beneath while the second truck careened off and went over the sidewalk striking a pedestrian.

The driver pinned beneath the car was Joseph C. Cunningham, colored, 57, of 750 Columbia Road Northwest. He was removed by the Casualty Hospital attendants who arrived with an ambulance and treated at the hospital for fractures of the right leg, rib and left shoulder. Norris Smith, colored, 15, of 226 K Street Southwest, who was standing on the sidewalk was treated at Casualty for contusions to both hips. Driver of the truck which struck Smith, according to police, was James Jenkins, colored, 32, of 658 Twelfth Street Northeast.

Boy Hurt by Car

Carter Vaught, 6, of 4089 Alabama Avenue Southeast, was treated for head injuries and bleeding of the nose at Casualty Hospital after being struck by a car in front of his home. Driver of the striking automobile was Isaac Salzberg, of 1360 Peabody Street Northwest, police reported. The boy's condition is undetermined.

William J. Jordan, colored, 14, of Jefferson Heights, Md., was injured while riding a bicycle on Division Avenue Northeast, near Eastern Avenue. Police said he struck a pile of loose stones which threw him. He was treated at Gallinger Hospital for a lacerated face and right arm and concussion.

Two persons were brought to Georgetown Hospital from an accident on the Lee Highway at Garden City. They are Thomas Stickel, 16, of Fairfax, Va., who was treated for a possible fractured skull, dislocated right shoulder, multiple lacerations of the face and arms; and Arthur M. Smith, 16, of Fairfax, Va., who was treated for contusions of the chest.

Pedestrian Hit

Jacob Hinkel, 70, of 639 Princeton Place Northwest, was injured by a car at Seventh and D Streets Northwest. He was treated for lacerations and shock and released from Garfield Hospital.

Fred H. Uber, 63, of 512 Third Street Northeast, was struck by an automobile at Tenth and H Streets Northwest and treated for a fractured right leg at Emergency Hospital. Driver of the car was Clarence B. Lilly, of Edmonston, Md., police said.

An automobile driven by James E. Davis, 33, of Baltimore, Md., collided with another driven by Olufa Osborne, 57, of San Bruno, Calif., at Third Street and Adams Drive Southwest. Mrs. Olufa Osborne, 50, was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and bruises. Mrs. James E. Davis, 36, and two children, Joan, 3, and Dudley, 5, were treated at Providence Hospital for cuts.

In another accident at Fourth and Franklin Streets Northeast, Elsie W. Lewis, 33, colored, 122 Girard Street Northeast, suffered head injuries and was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Ralph M. Zust, 5, 510 E Street Northeast, suffered minor injuries when he ran into the rear of a car driven by Samuel C. Vassey, 34, 314 B Street Northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Catholic Group To Entertain Service Men

The Washington Catholic Service Organizations announces that extensive plans are being formulated for the entertainment of service men on leave in Washington.

The Rev. Thomas B. Dade, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Church, said that recreational facilities will be available within a week. The service organization will open clubrooms and will arrange weekly dances and other recreation and sleeping quarters for service men of all creeds.

At a meeting last night of the local committee of the National Catholic Community Service, election of officers was announced. John A. Reilly was named president; Herman A. Schulteis, Michael Kehoe and Joseph Malloy, vice presidents; Dr. James Allen Nolan, secretary; J. Francis Reilly, recording secretary, and Michael Calnan, treasurer. Gerald Strang, former captain of the boxing team at Catholic University and now associated with the Merrick Boys' Club, was elected executive secretary.

Another Million Voted for Army Medical Library

A bill approving expenditure of $1,000,000 more than previously authorized to provide the War Department with a new Army Medical Library and Museum yesterday passed the House.

The measure carries a total authorization of $4,750,000, but, it was pointed out, $1,000,000 of this amount is for purchase of a site east of the Folger Library and the Library of Congress Annex. The site has been approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and was described as "excellent" by Maj. Gen. James Magee, the surgeon general.

The medical library, largest of its kind in the world, is comprised of a collection of 500,000 volumes.

BUNDLED UP against the chilly Potomac breezes which swept the Watergate last night are Sylvia Waldman, Anne Gelfand and Helen Garfinkle, who were in the audience for the National Symphony Orchestra concert

Postlude By Ray C. B. Brown

Stewart Hailed at Watergate, But Rain Threat Cuts Crowd

Reginald Stewart conducts the National Symphony Orchestra at the Potomac Watergate on Monday night, with Millard Taylor as violin soloist. Program: Overture to "Prodana Nevesta" (Smetana), Violin Concerto in G minor (Bruch), Symphony No. 3 in F major (Brahms), "Capriol Suite" (Warlock), Polka and Fugue from "Svanda Dudak" (Weinberger).

In the lottery of fair or foul weather, the National Symphony Orchestra drew a lucky number last evening, when the third summer concert suffered neither postponement, interruption nor curtailment. There were times when the auditors cast apprehensive glances at the occasional flares of lightning behind the Virginia hills, but the storm passed by in the distance and no rain fell. A full moon was veiled now and then by scudding wrack, and a cool breeze rippled the surface of the river, bringing comfort after the sultriness of the afternoon.

BROWN

The possibility of showers had a deterrent effect upon patrons, cutting the attendance down to some 5,000. Vacancies were most apparent in the reserved-chair section on the terrace, while the wide flight of steps presented its usual aspect of serried humanity. Flotillas of canoes flanked the barge on both sides, and the balustrades of the bridge and the boulevard were fringed with auditors.

Reginald Stewart, conductor of the Toronto promenade concerts, made his second appearance at the Watergate, and the cordial welcome extended to him proved that his visit several summers ago had not been forgotten. His direction of the program deepened one's impression of his sterling musicianship and his authority on the podium. He began the concert with a vivacious performance of Smetana's well-worn overture to "Prodana Nevesta," which was followed by Max Bruch's G minor violin concerto with the orchestra's young concertmaster, Millard Taylor, as soloist.

Mr. Taylor gave an admirable reading of the concerto, marked by eloquence of phrasing and technical ease. Despite the humidity of the air, his intonation was always just and stood the severe test of amplification without impairment. His tone had warmth and richness, and he evoked from the music its full poetic content. Not only was the audience delighted by his interpretation but also his orchestral colleagues, who hailed him with bravos at the close.

To the third symphony of Brahms Mr. Stewart gave a reading which emphasized its lyric quality without detracting from its structural solidity. The performance had both breadth of vision and insight into detail, and there was notable beauty in the treatment of the lovely second movement. The finale was given an impetus which fully disclosed the virility and the noble sincerity of that triumphant climax.

The novelty brought to us by the Canadian visitor was the "Capriol Suite" by Philip Heseltine, alias Peter Warlock, who enriched English music of our day with numerous fine songs. This suite is a series of jolly dances with such sixteenth century names as Basse-Danse, Pavane, Tordion, Bransles, Pieds-en-l'Air and Mattachins. The tunes, according to the program note by Edward N. Waters, came from Thoinot Arbeau's "Orchesographie," an instructive dialogue on dancing.

The program formally ended with the popular polka and fugue from Jaromir Weinberger's opera, "Svanda Dudak," but it was lengthened by four extra numbers: Berlioz's "Rakoczi March," the Strauss waltz, "Tales from the Vienna Woods;" Boccherini's minuet from the E major quintet, and the "Valse Triste" of Sibelius.

D. C. Junior Board to Induct West as President Thursday

MILLARD F. WEST, Jr.,

Millard F. West, jr., 31, newly elected president of the Washington Junior Board of Commerce, will be inducted into office at the organization's luncheon meeting Thursday at 12:30 p. m. at the Annapolis Hotel.

Aid to national defense and youth welfare will be among the first orders of business of the Junior Board during the coming year, according to West.

West is vice president of the securities firm of Ferris, Exnicios & Co. He is married, has a 2-year-old daughter, and lives at 1837 Wyoming Avenue Northwest. He was graduated from Western High School and in 1932 from Princeton University. In 1936 he received an LL. B. degree from National University.

At Princeton West rowed on the varsity crew and was a member of the Quadrangle Club. He is a member of Sigma Nu Phi, national law fraternity. His father, the late Millard F. West, once served as acting commissioner of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. He succeeds Harold D. Fangboner as president of the Junior Board.

1,500 to Fete Justice Jackson

More than 1,500 officers and employes of the Department of Justice will attend an informal reception at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow at 5 p. m. for Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, whose appointment to the Supreme Court bench was confirmed by the Senate yesterday.

The reception will be held in the main ballroom of the Mayflower, with the receiving line in the Chinese Room. The voluntary committee on arrangements includes: Ugo Carusi, Edgar Ford, Leighton Cornwell, Harry Marselli, Thomas D. Quinn, A. Devitt Vanech, Nathan Franke, Marvin Smith, Walter Moore, Carl Pergler, Frank Read, Ewing Wright, Frank Walker, John R. Benney, W. R. Glavin, James V. Bennett, L. Paul Winings, Kenneth Spencer, A. O. Bearn, Harvey Donaldson, Joe Prendergast, D. M. Lyons and Jack Love.

Staggered Paydays Go Into Effect

75,000 Federal Workers to Get First Checks Today Under New Plan

It should take only half as long for some 75,000 of Uncle Sam's employes to cash checks or buy stamps today on the first of the staggered pay days for Government employes.

One-half of approximately 150,000 Federal workers will continue to receive their checks on the fifteenth and last days of the month, while the other half will receive theirs today—the eighth—and again on the twenty-third.

The plan was sponsored by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, after it had been long advocated by Washington businessmen and workers and studied by the Treasury. Senator Capper stated that the idea had been brought to his attention by an editorial in The Post advocating the move.

Employes in the Departments of War, Navy, Treasury, Commerce and Agriculture and the Federal Security and Federal Works Agencies will be paid on the new dates, President Roosevelt stated in his order of June 7 creating the stagger system.

Besides aiding service in banks and postoffices, the staggered paydays are expected to distribute crowds in theaters and stores more evenly through the course of a month. Merchants supported the move because it means that payments of bills will be spread over a month instead of coming in two rush periods following each of the two paydays under the old system.

The District Government's first payday under the stagger system will come July 17. City employes formerly paid on the fifteenth will receive checks on the seventeenth and those who have been paid on the last da of each month will get their salaries on the second day of the next month, said Maj. James James Lusby, disbursing officer.

Employes of the District's various institutions such as Gallinger Hospital, the Industrial Home School, the District Jail will be paid on the third and eighteenth of each month, Lusby reported.

He stated that first suggestions to make municipal paydays the seventh and twenty-second were discarded because the days fell too close to the Federal dates.

Relief Checks Likely to Be Ready Today

Relief checks, totaling some $180,000, held up because of late passage of the District supply bill, will be issued today, or at the latest tomorrow, Acting Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning announced last night.

He estimated that payments in about 7,400 cases, due July 1, have been withheld because money for the purpose has not been deposited to the District's credit. Van Hyning explained that funds for general relief must first clear the Treasury Department and Social Security Board before becoming available to the city.

About 4,000 families and 3,500 individuals are now waiting for relief payments, Van Hyning said. A similar situation confronted District officials two years ago when the supply bill was not passed by Congress until the last minute.

The appropriation bill for the current fiscal year was signed by the President at Hyde Park last week.

Van Hyning admitted that "considerable suffering" would result until the funds are released.

Board to Honor Maj. Charles Dodd And His Wife

Maj. Charles H. Dodd, divisional commander of the Salvation Army, and Mrs. Dodd will be honored at a luncheon today at the Evangeline given by the citizens' advisory board of the Salvation Army.

Maj. Dodd recently was transferred to Baltimore, where he will assume command of the Maryland and Northern West Virginia Division. A public farewell meeting will be conducted in the Temple Auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight.

Resolutions commending the major and his wife for services rendered the city and for advances in the local Salvation Army program made under the major's administration will be read at the luncheon.

Md. Police Probe Mystery Shooting Of D. C. Salesman

Annapolis, Md., July 7 (AP).—State and Anne Arundel County police were investigating today the mysterious shooting of Emmett S. Revercomb, 35-year-old Washington automobile salesman, treated at Emergency Hospital last night for bullet wounds in the hip and groin.

Eastport police held Revercomb, his wife, Violet, 30, and Bernard J. Mattingly, of Mount Rainier. Mattingly drove Revercomb to the hospital, police said.

9 Properties Are Returned To Tax Rolls

The Board of Tax Appeals yesterday ordered nine tax-exempt District properties returned to the tax rolls.

Continuing its investigation of tax-exempt real estate holdings, the board's action returns to the tax rolls more than $160,000.

As in the past, properties ordered taxable included mostly real estate owned by religious groups. Two of the most important were the Salvation Army properties at 1501 Seventh Street Northwest, for colored adults, and a cinder-block structure owned by the national board of the Y. W. C. A., now used by the Dodge Hotel and on a lot adjacent to the hotel.

The Salvation Army property is assessed at $43,379 and the Y. W. C. A. at $52,800.

Other premises included in the taxable list were:

A building at 1530 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, owned by the Church of God, assessed at $4,689—ordered taxed with the exception of two rooms used strictly for religious purposes: the Nazareth Social Service Center, Inc., Second and I Streets Northwest, assessed at $13,413; property at Tenth and D Streets Southwest, owned by the Ryland Methodist Church and assessed at $18,838.

The Baptist Church at 1264 Second Street Southwest, assessed at $835; a caretaker's home and storage place owned by the Second Church of Christ Scientist, First and C Streets Northwest, assessed at $17,174; a vacant lot at 415-17 First Street Southeast, belonging to the Institutional Mission, Inc., and assessed at $1,882, and a building at New York and New Jersey Avenue listed in the name of Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore.

Meridian Hill Park Ready for Opening Starlight Concert

With the completion of a $1,000 concert shell, the final testing of an amplifying system, and the installation of 2,000 chairs, Meridian Hill Park was transformed yesterday into a concert site ready for the opening of the Starlight Chamber Music series tonight. A program by the Primrose String Quartet will begin at 8:15 p. m.

C. C. Cappel, manager of the concerts, said arrangements for transportation facilities to the park had been completed with the Capital Transit Co. Street cars on the Fourteenth and U Street lines will be scheduled for the convenience of the concert patrons, and extra buses on lines near the park will also be added.

The quartet, led by William Primrose, noted English violist, will include in tonight's program the Mozart Quartet in D minor, the Smetana Quartet "From My Life," and short works by MacEwen, Gainger and Tschaikowsky.

Aluminum Drive Committee To Discuss Campaign Today

Official discussions of Washington's forthcoming drive to collect aluminum in the interest of national defense will get under way at 10 a. m. today when a special steering committee meets at the District Building.

The committee was named yesterday by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, executive officer of the District Defense Council. P. Y. K. Howat, local businessman, was appointed chairman.

The "aluminum for defense" campaign is scheduled locally for July 22-24. Door-to-door solicitations, said Whitehurst, will be made July 22. Collections will be made the next day and the final day will be used to "clean up," Whitehurst announced.

The planning committee headed by Howat includes Fred A. Smith, president of the Board of Trade; Arthur Sundlum, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; Harry Wender, Washington attorney; Edgar Morris, of the Board of Trade, and Arthur Heaton, civic leader.

Chairmen for eight subcommittees are expected to be selected at today's meeting. These will include leaders for solicitation, collection deposits, publicity, transportation, a special women's group, a committee to solicit business houses and hotels and a committee to arrange for protecting collections.

It is planned to erect a large wire "bank" on the lawn in front of the District Building for receiving contributions. Police Precincts throughout the city will be made available as collection points.

Boy and Girl Scouts and possibly policemen and firemen will be enlisted to canvas communities for aluminum scraps, pots and pans.

Whitehurst said detailed plans for the campaign would be announced following today's meeting of the arrangements group.

Debate Set On Location Of Airport

Beverage Board Will Confer Today On Whether It's In District or Virginia

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will debate today whether the new National Airport is in Virginia or the District, after hearings yesterday on the flying field's application for a liquor-dispensing license.

Chairman Thomas Lodge indicated, however, that the board probably would be bound by a ruling of Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, May 10, holding that the new airport is within District limits.

Testifying before the board yesterday, Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, contended the Gravelly Point site was developed with WPA funds "specifically forbidden" for use in the District and said there was "absolutely no question" but what the airport is in Virginia.

Opposes License

Smith said he "emphatically opposed" issuance of the airport liquor license and warned members of the ABC Board they had "no jurisdiction to issue licenses in Virginia."

He further warned that State authorities would "undoubtedly" prosecute anyone acting under a license issued across the river by the District board.

He was followed to the witness stand by Thomas S. Settle, executive secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and W. G. Hayward, civil engineer for the National Park Service, both of whom testified that the airport administration building was some 200 feet inside Virginia—according to the high-water mark of 1791.

Hayward, who surveyed the Gravelly Point location, said he had never seen a map which placed the airport building within the District limits.

Seal Refers to Keech

Former Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, representing Air Terminal Services, Inc., declared the board should be bound by Keech's ruling.

"This board," he added, "is not the proper agency to fix a boundary between the District and Virginia."

Speaking in support of the liquor license application, Robert G. Thatch, vice president of Air Terminal Service, Inc., certified that the airport coffee shop already was operating under verbal agreement with the District Health Department and the barber shop was licensed by District authorities.

Two D. C. Men Fined

Two Washington men, accused by Prince Georges County police of operating a numbers racket in the county, were fined $300 each yesterday in police court at Upper Marlboro.

Nicholas Sakell was charged with operating a lottery and Peter Kaneloponlos with possession of lottery tickets.

Corporal John Dent, who made the arrests, said the men were operating from a private home near Cheverly.

American League All-Stars Favored Today

National Loop Is Installed 8-5 Underdog

52,000 to Throng Into Briggs Stadium; Detroit Has Holiday Air; USO Will Benefit

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, Mich., July 7.—Detroit is bustling tonight in the midst of a mass concentration of baseball's big names, assembled for the morrow's All-Star game at Briggs Stadium. In a frenzy of world series atmosphere, the American League's hand-picked stars have been established as the favorites to win over the National League's finest culls at odds ranging from 7 to 5 to 8 to 5.

From every point in the league they came today and tonight, the superlative stars of baseball, to contest in the major league's dream came. Joe DiMaggio, Johnny Mize, Bob Feller, Carl Hubbell, Jimmy Foxx, Whitlow Wyatt, Ted Williams, Mel Ott—the prestige of each big league riding with their efforts tomorrow.

Fifty-two thousand fans, Briggs Stadium's capacity, will see the game and dump approximately $70,000 in gate receipts into the coffers of the United Service Organization's fund, which is the beneficiary of the ball game. On the promise of fair weather, the park will be a sell-out. Tonight only 1,500 of the original 42,000 reserved seats remain, and 10,000 bleacher seats will go on sale tomorrow.

It's Shoot the Works

Pre-game interest in Detroit is challenging the war news for a prominent place on the front pages of Detroit papers, and Detroit police and transit systems are prepared to handle the crowds on a World Series basis. Hotel lobbies tonight were choked with baseball followers agape at the stream of stars checking in or lolling about the premises.

A shoot-the-workes program was decided upon today by Manager Del Baker of the American League All-Stars. He announced definitely that the American League team would lead off with Cleveland's Bob Feller in the box. Thus was promised a pitching duel of titantic proportions, for earlier in the day Manager Bill McKechnie of the National League had announced that Whitlow Wyatt, of the Brooklyn club, would be his opening pitcher.

It will be the respective leading pitchers of the two leagues at the outset for the three innings to which each pitcher is limited in the All-Star game. Feller, with 16 victories to his credit in the American League, will be unveiling his fast ball against Wyatt, who has won 11 games in the National against four defeats. It will be Feller's fast ball vs. Wyatt's curving.

Hudson May Be Third

Manager Baker, who had been hinting that Washington's young right-hander, Sid Hudson, might be honored with the starting job tomorrow, is still undecided if Hudson will figure in the game. Baker has announced that his second pitcher will be Thornton Lee, left-handed ace of the White Sox. His third pitcher, Baker refused to name.

"It might be Hudson, or it might be Edgar Smith, of the White Sox. I can't say yet," asserted Baker. "Much will depend on how things are going by the end of the sixth inning when Lee will have to come out of there. I understand Bucky Harris has Hudson fresh and ready and I wouldn't be unwilling to take a chance with him, but I can't tell yet."

Indications are that McKechnie will follow up Wyatt with Carl Hubbell, screwball artist of the Giants, as his second pitcher and then toss Claude Passeau, of the Cubs, at the American League as his third pitcher.

Power vs. Pitching

Line-ups announced today promise that tomorrow's ball game will be another test of American League power vs. National League pitching and defense. The American League batting order, from top to bottom, may take on nightmarish aspects for the National League, containing as it does a home run threat in virtually every position. On the power side, the American League seems to have a distinct edge with a line-up that numbers such as Joe DiMaggio, Jeff Heath, Ted Williams, Joe Cronin, Cecil Travis and Bill Dickey in its array.

Whereas Manager McKechnie was positive about his starting line-up, Manager Del Baker refused to announce more than a tentative batting order for the American League until he could meet his players tomorrow morning.

Baker indicated, however, that Washington would have at least one man in the starting line-up when he named Cecil Travis and Ken Keltner as his third baseman. It was apparent from his talk that Baker was leaning toward Travis in preference to Keltner, inasmuch

Challedon Out Of Hollywood Cup Race

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 7.—W. L. Brann's once mighty Challedon was withdrawn today from defense of his Hollywood Gold Cup championship.

Trainer L. T. (Whitey) Whitehill announced Challedon's withdrawal on the eve of weight assignments for the $75,000 stake a week from Saturday.

Challedon, long-striding son of Challenger VI was disappointing in his 1941 debut Friday in the American Handicap, running far back of Mioland, Woof Woof and Big Pebble.

Whitehill had no explanation for the withdrawal except to say he didn't believe the horse was up to his best. His start last week was the first since suffering a leg injury some months ago.

It was a tough blow for Georgie Woolf, the veteran jockey, who was to have been aboard Brann's former national champion.

Woolf has ridden every Gold Cup winner, Seabiscuit in 1938, Kayak II in 1939 and Challedon last year—and was hopeful of making it four in a row.

Racing Secretary Francis Dunne announced two other Gold Cup withdrawals, Millsdale Stable's Bay View nad Andy K. Both are in the East.

Derringer Sues Store for $65,000 In Damage Suit

Tampa, Fla., July 7 (AP).—Paul Derringer, ace pitcher for the world champion Cincinnati Reds baseball team, alleged in a damage suit today that his playing efficiency had been "greatly reduced" as a result of an eye injury suffered when he struck his head against a scaffolding in a Tampa electrical supply store here last November.

Derringer is suing Raybro Electric Supplies, Inc., for $65,000 on the ground that the scaffolding was "negligently and carelessly" placed above the door after he entered and that "no warning of the obstruction was given to him when he started to leave."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 7.—What's on your mind, pal?

The all-star game?—The impression has just gotten around that the players in the all-star game regard it with deep misgivings and would much rather be off somewhere, fishing or whittling, instead of playing for charity. But the grousers of this nature could be numbered on the pitching paw of Mordecai "Three-fingered" Brown. This tiny minority probably would have squawked a lot louder if it had been snubbed by the selection committee. We think that on the whole the all-star game develops as much college try as the World Series, and better baseball—for the series pressure isn't on.

CONSIDINE

The ratio of malcontent is considerably higher among the owners and managers. The owners we have in mind hate to display their chattels for nothing and hate to see them risk getting hurt, as Dizzy Dean was hurt in the game at Washington in 1937 and Ival Goodman was hurt in the New York game of 1939. The discontented owners and managers grumble often, but yell "misquoted" when a reporter puts their words in print. An exception is Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, who thinks the game is crummy, is honest enough to say so frankly and cooperates as little as possible with it. When asked a week ago if he were going to save Ted Lyons for the big show in Detroit tomorrow (Tuesday) Jimmy snorted, "He's pitching for me Sunday, and he's a once-a-week pitcher."

Game Has Produced Many Thrills

The average all-star player exerts himself in the game because that thing inside him that makes him great compels him to give the game the best he's got. Vanity, pride, character and a few other things are in that compelling factor. Some of baseball's grandest moments have come out of the all-star game. For instance:

Babe Ruth's game-winning home run, with Charley Gehringer on base, that won the first game in 1933 . . . Carl Hubbell's deathless pitching streak in the 1934 game, when he whiffed Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin in succession . . . Mel Harder's brilliant pitching and Jimmy Foxx's home run in the 1935 game . . . Joe DiMaggio's "goat" role in the 1936 game . . . The way the Yankees accounted for seven of the eight runs the American League team scored in winning the 1937 game . . . The pitching of Johnny Vander Meer in 1938 . . . The catch Joe Gordon made in the 1939 game, and the bleak mastery of Cincinnati's great one-two punch, Derringer and Walter, in last year's game.

We like the idea of naming different beneficiaries of the game. The first eight games were for the Association of Professional Baseball players, and that fund for broken-down ball players is happily oversubscribed. Tomorrow's (Tuesday's) game in Detroit will be for USO. It is a good precedent to set for the future years of a fine, worth-while sports rivalry.

Enter—Chick Meehan

The fight game?—Chick Meehan was never accused of faint-heartedness back in the days when he was building the N. Y. U. football team into a fairly accurate counterpart of the progressive college in "rackety-rax."

Now he has proven his lively gall-power once again. At Ebbets Field Meehan, with the aid of Jimmy Bronson, will battle Mike Jacobs for a share of Jacobs' outdoor fight audience. The card Meehan has been able to line up for his first assault on Mike's monopoly isn't too hot, but the main event of Tamio Mauriello against Steve Mamakos is fair enough. Mike has most of the outstanding talent in the country tied up like a kidnapped contortionist.

Meehan's entrance into the tough New York fight picture is a healthy thing and we wish him well. For inspiration he can look to the ring career of Jacobs himself. The fabulous career of Jacobs as an entrepreneur began under much less favorable conditions at the Bronx Coliseum in 1934, when the powerful Madison Square Garden was about as much in sole possession of the fight racket as Jacobs is today. Mike's opening wedge was a disgruntled champion (Barney Ross), and he followed that up by getting an exclusive contract with the then barely known Joe Louis. Which was all that any promoter needed to take charge of the game.

Champion or Underdog

Golf?—If any additional testimony is needed to convince you that the life of a golf champ is the most precarious in sport, consider the P. G. A. championships which opened in Denver. Craig Wood, hailed as a super-dooper just a month ago, is not the favorite. A victory for Wood would be a sensation in golf circles, whereas in almost any other sport you can name, a champion goes on from one peak performance to the next one. There are about two dozen golfers in the country who would have an even or better than even chance of beating Wood in any golf test. Not that this denotes that the open champ's feet are made of clay. It simply means that golf champs die like flies.

Mrs. Cooke Wins Two Net Titles

By the Associated Press

New York, July 7.—Rain interrupted the Eastern Clay Court tennis championships again today, but didn't prevent Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke from winning two titles—one before the showers and one after.

The Nation's sixth ranking player took only 35 minutes to deprive Virginia Wolfenden, youthful San Francisco player, of her singles title, 6—1, 6—1. Then, after the downpour had canceled the rest of the day's program, Sarah learned she had won the doubles title with Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, by default.

Mrs. Cooke and Miss Osborne were to have played Mrs. Louise Raymond Ganzenmuller and Mrs. Millicent Hirah Lang, but Mrs. Ganzenmuller withdrew because of another tournament commitment.

In tomorrow's finals, Frankie Parker, of Altadena, Calif., will defend his men's singles crown against Gene Mako, of Los Angeles. In the doubles, Parker and Charley Mattmann, of the University of Southern California face Ted Schroeder, of Glendale, Calif., and Jack Kramer, of Los Angeles, the national doubles champions.

'No Trade' Rule Of American League Voided

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 7.—The American League voted today to rescind its rule against a pennant winner making trades, effective at the close of the present season.

The restriction was put into effect by the league in the winter of 1939 after the New York Yankees had won four consecutive world championships and permitted them to make trades only through waviers.

An attempt to remove it was made last winter after the Detroit Tigers won the American League pennant, but was unsuccessful, and the action today will continue this restraint on the club for the remainder of the current campaign.

At the same time, Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis rejected a proposal that Hank Greenberg, last year's star outfielder of the Tigers, but now in the Army, be presented with his most valuable player award before tomorrow's All-Star game. Landis said no presentations, no matter how meritorious, could be made a part of the program.

P.G.A. Indicates Satisfaction With Its Tourney Boss

By the Associated Press

Denver, July 6.—The contract of Fred Corcoran, tournament bureau manager of the Professional Golfers Association, is being renewed for a three-year period, Tom Walsh, P. G. A. president, said tonight.

Corcoran became the association's first tournament organizer January 1, 1937. This is the first extension of his contract.

Simon, O'Gatty Still Trying to Fight

New York, July 7 (AP).—The Abe Simon-Joe O'Gatty fight was postponed again tonight, but they're going to keep on trying.

Rained out last Monday, the bout between the oversize New Yorker and the Newark, N. J., heavyweight was set back a day and then put off until tonight when someone forgot to procure a pair of boxing gloves big enough for Abe. When it rained again today, the bout was postponed until July 21.

Middle States Net Tourney Rained Out

Sammy Snead Next With 69; Hogan Has 71

Mel Shorey Far Back With 82; Rut Coffey, Out in 35, Takes 77; 2 Match Par Figures

Cherry Hills, Denver, July 7.—Dark Horse Harry Bassler and experienced campaigner, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, neither ranked among the top-heavy starting favorites, battered par into submission today to share the lead at the half-way mark of 36-hole qualifying tests in the 1941 National Professional Golfers Association championship.

Each clubbed a resounding 68, 3 under par for Cherry Hills, to lead a parade of 99 entrants, representing the cream of the links crop, in the pros' annual ball-belting festival to determine the head man of their organization.

Bassler Out in 35

Par for the water-trapped mile-high layout with its lightning-fast greens is 35, 36—71. Bassler, from Las Altos, Calif., and a veritable stranger to the golfing public at large, moved to the front end of the procession with a 31, 37. Harrison, an old hand at the big-time tournament competition but never a winner in the major national events, turned in the most consistent round. He put together a pair of 34s with a blazing finish of two birdies and a par.

Rut Coffey, Hagerstown, Md., professional matched par figures on the out nine with a 35 but he played bogey golf coming back and took 42 strokes for a 77. His score was the best of the Middle Atlantic delegation, however, as Mel Shorey, Indian Spring Club pro from Silver Spring, Md., had 39-43, 82, and Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., withdrew.

Shorey out 454 554 435—39.
In 554 564 534—43—82.
Coffey out 443 482 534—35.
In 555 454 455—42—77.

Starting favorite Ben Hogan, the Texas-born marksman who opened as the solid choice to take everything in sight, had trouble finding the range to the greens as well as bucking an unruly putter, and ended in a tie at par 71 with Hepry Ransom, young fellow Texan from Fort Worth.

Hogan, who mastered par with ease during nearly two weeks of advance preparations here, started off in spectacular fashion with a 33 but ran into difficulties on the incoming nine.

Snead Has 69

One shot behind the leaders rested Sammy Snead. The Virginia cannon ball roamed the outgoing stretch in 33 and came home with 36. His putter was his nemesis and cost him three strokes on as many greens.

Snead, along with Byron Nelson, the defending champion, and likable Craig Wood, winner of the United States Open title last month, teed off as second choice to Hogan. Wood started shakily, going two over par on the first four holes. He was unable to assemble his game for the balance of the round and coupled a pair of 38s for his 76. He was confident he would be among the 64 qualifiers at the end of tomorrow's second round.

Nelson Picks Up

Defending Champion Nelson declined to turn in a score. He used up 37 shots on the first nine and, realizing there was no hope for him to win the diamond-studded medal going to low scorers for 36 holes, did not bear down on the incoming trip. His card, for the 15 holes available, showed he was seven

Private Hank to See All-Star Game, Anyway

Fort Custer, Mich., July 7 (U.P.).—Private Hank Greenberg, the Detroit Tigers' husky $55,000-a-year outfielder who became a $21 monthly draftee May 7, will be in the stands at Briggs' Stadium in Detroit tomorrow to watch the major league all-star baseball game.

Greenberg, assigned to an anti-tank company of the Second Infantry, today was granted a 38-hour pass until 7 a. m. Wednesday by Fort Custer officers to see the game. He returned to the fort last week after taking part in Tennessee Army maneuvers during the last month.

National League's Big Chance

Detroit, Mich., July 7.—Circumstance has dropped into the lap of the National League two chances to recoup some of its lost prestige. When its all-star team meets up with the American League All-Stars tomorrow in Briggs Stadium, the National League will be out to win, or failing that at least to stop Joe DiMaggio.

POVICH

The American League is compelled to win to maintain the edge it is supposed to hold over the National, but the National may be able to claim no worse than a draw, even if licked in the ball game. It would be something of a triumph if National League pitching were to hold the sensational DiMaggio hitless.

Down through the years, National Leaguers who have seen their teams win only one World Series since 1934 and lose five of the eight previous All-Star games, have been mumbling that the American League is power-crazy. The better pitching, they argued, was to be found in the National League. The National played the more scientific baseball, was another of their arguments.

Consider the gloating the National League could do if its pitchers tomorrow stopped the hitting of DiMaggio, whose streak has now extended through 48 games. It would sound something like "N-n-n Yes, when your great DiMag runs into good pitching, he doesn't hit. He's been belting around those dimes-a-dozen pitchers in the American League for 48 games. The first time National League pitchers face him, they stop him."

The license to make that boast would wipe out any sting of defeat for the National League in tomorrow's game. It wouldn't be conclusive evidence, of course, that National League pitching is superior, but it would be a nice break for the National League and a nice-sounding argument at least.

DiMag the Man of the Hour

DiMaggio is making this All-Star game. Whether or not he will hit tomorrow transcends the ball game itself as a topic in the lobbies and in street or wherever baseball fans foregather. What he will do against the likes of Carl Hubbell, Whitlow Wyatt, Claude Passeau and other National League aces who may go to the mound is the chief object of speculation. If Manager Del Baker doesn't leave DiMaggio in the full ball game to give him a shot at getting his hit, Briggs Stadium's 52,000 customers are going to feel bilked.

Paradoxically, the most colorless personality on the ball field tomorrow will be Joe DiMaggio, unless it is his little brother, Dominic, of the Red Sox. It sort of proves that crowd-appeal can be founded on nothing more than an ability to swat the ball with a bat. DiMaggio didn't seek his fame. It came to him because he bats the ball better than anybody else.

DiMag doesn't have the best batting average in the American League. That honor belongs to Boston's Ted Williams who is a member of the league's four-hundred with his .402 average. But DiMag's feat of hitting in 48 straight games has stamped him as a man apart. No man in the long history of the big leagues ever hit in more than 44 consecutive games.

Detroit was buzzing tonight with one other topic—Jimmy Dykes indefinite suspension by League President Will Harridge. Mr. Harridge cracked down on the White Sox's manager for his latest abuse of two of the league's umpires in Chicago the other day and in the harshest statement ever issued from his office Harridge declared that Dykes must "fall in line" with other managers in respecting the umpires' authority.

Dykes' Attitude Irked William

It seems that Harridge has been building up to just such a crackdown on Dykes, long famed for his free-hand interpretation of the genealogy of American Legue umpires when he didn't like their decisions. Dykes got himself in dutch with Harridge, it seems, during an interview he gave to this department in Washington last week. At that time, the White Sox manager minimized the importance of the All-Star game, Harridge's pet promotion.

"The pennant race is more important to me," said Dykes. "All-Star game or no All-Star game I'm going to pitch Ted Lyons against Cleveland the Sunday before."

Harridge apparently didn't like it. In a telegram to this department a few days ago, he took issue with the statement that many ballplayers were not keen about participating in the All-Star game. We had pointed out that they preferred the three-day vacation from the grind of the daily schedule to get in a fishing trip or so. Harridge cited a letter from George Tebbetts, Detroit catcher, who graciously expressed his gratitude for having been selected as an All-Star player, and pointed it out as typical.

But the league president was feeling none too kindly toward Dykes, because in the same telegram he took occasion to point out that "only because his own manager didn't vote for him was Teddy Lyons, of the White Sox, left off the All-Star team." It may have been more than a coincidence that the next time Dykes got in trouble with the umpires he was handed out the sternest rebuke to emanate from Harridge's office in recent years.

A Message to Will Harridge— From Bashful Jimmy Dykes

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 7.—Manager Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox, still smarting from the indefinite suspension for his latest row with American League umpires, left today for a physical checkup at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.

President William Harridge handed down the suspension Sunday, saying that Dykes used "obscene and abusive language" to Umpire Steve Basil when he was banished from Saturday's game with the Cleveland Indians.

Dykes said before leaving the city that he wrote a wire to Harridge yesterday but was talked out of sending it. He said it read thusly:

"Thanks for the suspension. Now why don't you suspend some of those incompetent umpires as a favor to the league and the fans?"

Dykes charges neither of the umpires working Saturday's game were in position to see the play in question. He charged players in the Cleveland bullpen interfered with Right Fielder Taft Wright's efforts to catch a foul fly.

Bogart, Peacock Invade New York for 2-Ball

G. F. Miller, Skinker Also Face Test

Anderson Memorial Golf Meet Popular; Other D. C. Stars Play Elsewhere

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The District will have at least two star amateur golf combinations in New York's John G. Anderson Memorial Tournament July 17-20 over the famous winged foot course unless present plans are altered. The Anderson tournament is a two-ball affair which annually draws one of the best fields in the East.

Ralph Bogart, the District champion who has played with Bobby Donohue for the past two years but failed to qualify, will have Roger Peacock as a partner this year. From Columbia, Earle Skinker and George F. Miller plan to take in the Mamaroneck, N. Y., tournament.

Bogart will also take another crack at the Shennocossett Invitation Tournament in Connecticut, where he was runner-up last year, and he has been invited to a two-ball tournament in New Jersey. He will be away from the District for nearly a month.

Peacock has a definite engagement with Larry Elliott, former Indian Spring member who is now announcing major network programs in New York, to defend their Tamarack Invitation Two-ball title in Port Chester, N. Y., the last week in August.

Bogart and Peacock would have an excellent chance in the Anderson Memorial Tournament if they were both playing the golf of which they are capable. They stack up as equals at least to last year's runner-up team of Otto Greiner, the Baltimore shotmaker, and Don O'Brien, semifinalist in last week's Virginia State Amateur, from Richmond.

Skinker and Bogart are both familiar with the Winged Foot course, having qualified for the match play rounds of the National Amateur Championship there last year.

Bobby Brownell, Middle Atlantic champion, who represented this city in several of the major amateur tournaments, plans no out-of-town competition this summer, except possibly the National Amateur. Brownell has filed an application with the FBI and is hopefully awaiting an answer. He wants to be in town if called.

Bob Morris, the National Public Links qualifier, will leave today for Spokane, Wash., and the National Public Links championship which starts next Monday. He is scheduled to arrive in Spokane, with the Baltimore delegation, Friday at 9:20 p. m.

Shorey Will Get Expenses at Least

Should Mel Shorey, the Indian Spring professional, fail to qualify for the match play rounds of the P. G. A. championship today, and he will need about a 74 or better to make the grade, he will receive approximately $76.50 as traveling expenses.

Each of the 64 qualifiers and first-round losers is guaranteed $100. The second-round losers receive $150, beaten eight in the third round $200, the beaten quarter-finalists $250, the losing semifinalists $350, runner-up $600 and winner $1,100.

The P. G. A. pays mileage on the following basis: Up to 2,000 miles, 2 cents per mile; the next 2,000, 2½ cents per mile, and all over 4,000 miles, 3 cents. Shorey will have traveled some 3,460 miles, round trip, and if he falls to qualify he will receive about $76.50.

Skinker Top Choice Today

Earle Skinker, the 19-year-old amateur golfer from Columbia, who has figured prominently in many of this section's major tournaments, but never won a junior title, is a heavy favorite to win the Middle Atlantic Junior Championship play today at Woodmont.

Skinker was runer-up to Otto Greiner last year at Columbia, but the latter, along with Bobby Brownell and Ralph Bogart, has passed the 21-year age limit for the sixth annual event.

The out-of-town delegation will be comparatively small, leaving Skinker's principal opposition coming from the local youngsters, Tom Brandon, the District Junior titlist, and Bill Cassedy, the Maryland State champion.

Dr. W. C. Barr, secretary of the Middle Atlantic Golf Association, will not make pairings for the event, but announced starting times for the first 18 holes will be from 8 to 9 a. m. and 12 to 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

The tournament is limited to junior members or sons of members of member clubs of the association who have not attained the aged of 21 years. The entry fee is $1.

Midget Racers Run Again Tonight at West Lanham

Speed records for the new West Lanham, Md., Raceway may fall by the wayside tonight when one of the finest fields of drivers assembled on an Eastern midget automobile racing track this season competes in a eight-event program at 8:30 o'clock.

Heading tonight's big parade of little-car talent will be Ernie Gesell and Henry Banks, two of the outstanding drivers in the United States and friendly feudists whose rivalry has thrilled thousands of spectators within the past two years.

Gesell, ranking No. 1 money winner this season, has been consistently defeated by Banks within the last two years. Banks chased Gesell out of the money while scoring at the Cedarhurst, Long Island, Speedway last Saturday night and also terminated Gesell's string of three consecutive major victories on the same track the week previously.

Postponed Debut

Banks was scheduled to make his debut here last week, but was unable to appear due to a damaged automobile. Two more high-powered newcomers to race at West Lanham tonight are Frank Bailey, eastern big car champion who handles the midgets equally well, and Bill Troutwine, a popular veteran who has turned in sensational victories from coast to coast.

Mike Joseph and Lyle Dickey, winners of the first two feature races at the West Lanham Speedway, will meet the challenge of these racing wizards as will such stars as Bill Schindler, Len Duncan, Rex Records, Johnny Ringer, Jim Forte, Andy DeVercelli and many others.

Schindler, the one-legged marvel, whose automobile cracked up in the semifeature at West Lanham last week, is one who feels his chances are good of beating the best time yet made on the new Raceway tonight. Schindler, intrigued by the steeply banked track, predicted last week that he would set a new speed record for West Lanham tonight. Several fellow drivers, with different ideas, proceeded to back Len Duncan to beat the best Schindler could do, and will be prepared to back their nominee at race time tonight.

Tickets for tonight's races will be on sale at the Standard Capitol Servicenter until 6 p. m. tonight and at the Speedway thereafter.

Atlanta Blanks All-Star Team, 5-0 Before 6,945

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, July 7.—The Atlanta Crackers, behind the five-hit hurling of the veteran, Allyn Stout, who went the route, defeated the Southern Association All-Stars, 5 to 0, tonight before a crowd of 6,945.

The Crackers, first team to win two of these All-Star attractions—the Atlanta Club won two years ago by a one-sided count—scored all their runs in the first three innings, climaxed with a three-run outburst in the third.

Only in the last inning, when the All-Stars put together two or their five singles, did they threaten to score.

Louisville, Ky., July 7 (AP).—Seventeen-year-old Doris Hart, Miami High School girl, today defeated third ranking Pauline Betz, of Winter Park, Fla., 8—6, 4—6, 6—3, to win the women's Southern Amateur Tennis championship at the Louisville Boat Club.

Kavakos, Fat Boy Play Tonight For Capital City Championship

The long awaited softball clash between Kavakos Grill and Fat Boy, with the Capital City League first half championship hanging in the balance, will be staged tonight at 8 p. m. at Washington Softball Stadium.

Fat Bay's stellar ace, Harold Steffes, who has a record of four victories in league play, during which time heturned in the only perfect no-hit, no-run game ever hurled in Washington, a second no-hitter and a one and a two-hitter, will oppose "Cannonball" Jack Smith, Kavakos Grill's outstanding hurling star. Steffes, in his four games, has permitted only three hits altogether and one earned run, while Smith, in his only league appearance for Kavakos, trimmed May Hardware with a masterful three-hit performance. Steffes, a "control" pitcher with a puzzling spin to his delivery, is a direct opposite of Smith, who "fogs 'em" with blinding speed and posesses one of the sharpest breaking curves in local hurling ranks.

Second half of the twin-bill, which will be the first softball here for the past ten consecutive days, will bring together Lansburgh's and Evening Star in the National Night League at 9:15 p. m.

Cards' Mound Future Indeed Rosy

Rickey Smiles About It Despite Present Losing Streak

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 7.—Branch Rickey, general manager of the Cardinals, still can smile even though the club has lost five straight.

He thinks about those young pitchers on Cardinal farms.

"We are developing successfully enough fine hurlers to eliminate worry in that department for some time to come," he asserts. "They're not all youngsters, either.

"Remember Hy Vandenberg? He's coming back. No doubt about it. He's pitching great ball for Rochester. Hy has lost only two games, won six or seven. But the main thing, the batters are not hitting him. Yes, you'll see Vandenberg back in the big time.

"That goes for Al Hollingsworth out at Sacramento, too. He's got himself 13 games so far in a league that's always produced heavy sluggers."

But Rickey's real pride rests in the ability of some of the newcomers.

"I'll name you five pitchers who have never been seen in the major leagues and whom batters are going to wish they never had seen.

"They are Albin Jurisnich and John Beazley, of New Orleans, in the Southern Association; Fred Martin and Howard Pollet, at Houston, in the Texas League, and George Munger, of Sacramento.

"These lads are just about ready for the big time. Martin has won 14 games with but 1 loss; Pollet has a dozen victories while dropping only two.

"Then there are John Grodzicki and Murry Dickson, with Columbus, of the American Association; Hank Gornicki and Herschel Lyons, with Rochester, and, say, we've got some fine boys in the lower leagues, too.

"Out in Springfield, Mo., of the Western Association, Cliff Hopkins and Syl Donnelly are going like gossip. Hopkins has lost 2 games, won about 15; Donnelly has only one setback against 13 victories. Ralph Scheef, of the same club, will be a famous hurler up here some day. He stands 8 and 3, respectively, in the won and lost column.

BRANCH RICKEY

Talent in 'Farm' Clubs Exceptionally Brilliant, Numerous

"So will Bob Doyle, of Asheville, N. C., in the Piedmont League. He's 6 fet 5 inches, very young, a fast runner nad hard hitter. He throws a ball so hard no one can see it. His only fault now is that the plate isn't big enough. When he finds it—another name in pitching annals.

"There are many more. All I can says is—our pitching worries are over for some time. Yes, sir."

Couple of Other Guys

Margate City, N. J., July 7 (AP).—Joe Louis rented a summer home at 2 Circle Drive today. Jack Dempsey rented the same house last summer.

Both were Philadelphia businessmen, however, not the ring celebrities.

Maryland Half-Mile Racing Opens Today at Hagerstown

Post Time 2:30; Card Has 8 Races

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 7.—Maryland's half-mile racing season, destined to carry the sport right up to the eve of the big time at Havre de Grace in mid-September, opens tomorrow at the local fair grounds. Time was when half-mile racing was of the country variety, but in recent years, it has gained momentum, on a smaller scale. It is virtually everything featured by the big-time circuits. Hagerstown, under the direction of Harold Bester, has the American totalisator, the electric starting gate, J. J. Jones camera and everything that has been put forward to help racing.

That half-mile racing is popular with the horsemen is proved by the fact that 274 entries were made this morning for tomorrow's eight-race program.

Fields here, for safety's sake, are limited to eight starters. Exactly 189 horses failed to get their names on the overnight entry sheet. The paper showed 105 horses with a chance to see action on the first day.

Bester Purse Is Feature

Tomorrow's feature race is the Harry E. Bester Purse, named for the father of President Harold Bester, who passed away after reviving the sport of kings in this section. The event is a sprint of 5 furlongs for 3-year-olds and upward. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan has 14 eligibles, fairly bristling with speed. The group includes ten horses which have won recently.

Hagerstown's meeting runs until a week from Saturday, with next Monday an off day. From here the sport visits Bel Air for ten days and then Cumberland, Marlboro and Timonium for like periods. For the first time, the Maryland halvers are offering minimum purses of $500. This has served to draw good horses. In addition eight flat races are now allowed on programs that do not include a steeplechase.

Post time for the first race is 2:30 p. m. The daily double is on the first and second races. Special race buses and trains will bring Washington to the scene. For a change there are no detours and repair work being done on Route 40 between here and Washington.

8 of 10 Banks In N. Y. Report Higher Profit

Copyright by Herald-Tribune

New York, July 7.—The features of the mid-year condition statements of the ten largest Wall Street banks were the improvement in their earnings, the continued expansion in loans and holdings of Government securities, the decline in deposits and the reduction in cash.

Of especial interest was the betterment in earnings. In view of the long continued rise in loans and investments of these banks the street had been looking forward impatiently to the time when the increased use of bank credit would be translated into increased earnings. In the case of eight out of the ten banks, earnings were higher in the second quarter as compared with the second quarter of 1940, with the increase strikingly large in several instances.

The June 30 statements marked the end of the first year of intensive development of the defense program by the United States. In this year the ten largest Wall Street banks show an aggregate increase of $628,755,000 in their loans and discounts.

Earnings of these banks for the second quarter and for the 12 months are set forth in the following figures, as computed by Robert S. Burns:

	2nd quarter, 1941.	2nd quarter, 1940.	12 Months, to June 30, 1941.	12 Months, to June 29, 1940.

Irving	.17	.16	.72	.65
Manhattan ...	.32	.21	1.18	1.08

*Before reserves, as reported by Bank.

Seven of these ten banks reported decreases in deposits during the second quarter. It is of some interest, however, to note that the trend in deposits here was different from that in other parts of the country. While demand deposits adjusted of the local reporting banks were falling $40,000,000 from April 2 to June 25, demand deposits adjusted of the weekly reporting banks in the 100 other reporting cities were rising $1,000,000,000.

Lumber Production Index Stands at 131%

The National Lumber Manufacturers Association reported yesterday that lumber production for the week ended June 28 stood at 131 per cent of the average of the corresponding week 1935-39 and shipments 133 per cent.

Production totaled 260,827,000 feet, which was two per cent less than the previous week, and 13 per cent greater than the corresponding week a year ago.

Drug Price Index Continues Higher

New York, July 7 (AP).—The index of chemical, oil, and drug prices compiled by the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter advanced in the week ended July 3 to 124.9 from 124.6 the previous week. A year ago it stood at 101.5.

The base of the index is the average of prices in 1926 and 1936, those years representing extremes of price fluctuations in the period between world wars one and two.

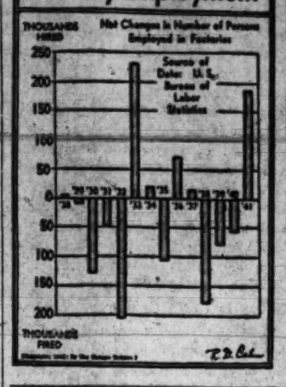
Hosiery Shipments Jump 16% in May

New York, July 7 (AP).—The National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers reported today total shipments of hosiery in May amounted to 11,749,506 dozens of pairs, a 16.2 per cent increase over May 1940. The total for the first 5 months was up 11.2 per cent to 60,378,049 dozens.

Failures' Total Off 5%

New York, July 7 (AP).—Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. reported today 216 industrial and commercial failures for the week ending July 3, a decline of 5 per cent under the 229 in the previous week. In the comparable 1940 week, there were 259 failures.

May Changes in Factory Employment



General Electric Orders Up 145% In Six Months

Schenectady, N. Y., July 7 (AP).—General Electric Co. announced today orders received during the first half of 1941 set a record for any six-month period in the company's history at $521,139,000 compared with $212,653,000 for the first six months of 1940, a jump of 145 per cent.

Total orders received during the three months ended June 30 also set a record at $263,757,000, a figure 129 per cent above the $115,163,000 in new business booked in the like quarter of 1940.

The company estimated orders definitely known to cover national defense equipment at $216,000,000 during the first six months of this year, including $104,000,000 during the second quarter. Total national defense orders since the program began were estimated at $466,000,000.

Seaboard Air Line Buys 13 Diesel Locomotives

New York, July 7 (AP).—Railway Age said today that Seaboard Air Line had ordered 13 Diesel-electric locomotives. Electro-motive corp. will build three freight units, two passenger engines and two switchers while American Locomotive Co. and Baldwin Locomotive works each were awarded contracts for three switchers.

Magor Car Corp. received an order from National Railways of Mexico for 1,000 box cars.

Post-Holiday Steel Rate Rises to 96.8%

New York, July 7 (AP).—Resumption of normal activity after the July 4 curtailment lifted steel operations to an estimated 96.8 per cent of capacity for this week compared with 93.7 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported today.

Bank Loans In Week Leap $70,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that banks made one of the largest increases in business loans last week that had been recorded since the defense program stimulated this form of credit.

In 101 leading cities from which figures were available, the gain in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans totaled $70,000,000 in the week ended July 2. This was the tenth consecutive weekly rise in these loans and brought the total of these cities to $5,895,000,000—$1,457,000,000 more than on the corresponding date last year.

Principal gains last week were $33,000,000 in New York City, $16,000,000 in the Chicago Federal Reserve district, and $9,000,000 in the San Francisco district.

The board's 101-city member bank condition statement gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on July 2, together with changes for the week and with the same week last year, in millions of dollars:

Boot, Shoe Output Gains 36% in May

Production of boots, shoes and slippers, other than rubber, totaled 41,087,435 pairs during May, a decline of 4.1 per cent from April output but an increase of 36.3 over May, 1940, the commerce department says. The decrease from April was accounted for principally by smaller production of women's shoes.

Stock Market Swings $1 to $4 Higher In Brisk Deals; Industrial Issues Lead

New York, July 7.—Financial markets swung upward today under the stimulus of a slightly brighter war picture and a mild touch of inflationary fever.

Gains in stocks ranged from 1 to 4 points at the best, centering principally in leading industrials. The trend was higher from the start and activity pronounced at intervals. Closing quotations were at or near the day's tops with dealings brisk in the final half hour.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks held an advance of .7 of a point at 42.6, widest upturn in this barometer since February 20. Volume of 896,510 shares compared with 463,770 last Friday and was the third largest for the year to date, next previous peak being that of May 6.

The push also was one of the broadest of the past several months, 795 individual issues being traded. Of these 564 were up, 86 down and 145 unchanged.

Wall Street found some bullish inspiration in the German-Russian war news which led to the thought in financial quarters that the Reds were putting up much greater opposition to the Nazi invasion than had been expected.

Business developments were on the side of recovery proponents and a sharp sprint of several commodities, appearently based on the thought Congress might object to price ceilings on farm staples, tended to stress recent inflationary tendencies, brokers said.

Word United States forces had occupied Iceland came as a market surprise after the close and superseded all other discussion in boardrooms.

Among commodities, wheat, cotton and cottonseed oil futures especially exhibted strength. At Chicago wheat was up 1⅞ to 2 cents a bushel, corn ahead ½ to ⅝, and hogs advanced 25 cents. Cotton finished with net improvement of $1.50 to $1.70 a bale.

Pepsi-Cola again was the fastest mover in the share list. It finished up 2¼ at 28½, a new high. Others prominent on the forward slant included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible Steel, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, U. S. Gypsum, Westinghouse, Johns-Manville, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Western Union, American Smelting, Great Northern and Southern Pacific.

Helpful to sentiment was a rebound in this week's estimated steel mill operations, reports of heavy public spending for consumer goods and the growing belief of some that idle cash might turn to dividend equities as a means of paying part of the forthcoming tax bill.

Given a lift in the Curb were Gulf Oil, Aluminum of America, Brewster Aero, Humble Oil, Glen Alden Coal, N. J. Zinc, Phoenix Securities, Royal Typewriter and Sherwin Williams. Transfers here were around 127,000 shares versus 96,000 in the previous full session.

A strong demand developed for low and medium priced railroad bonds today, lifting many fractions to more than a point. The general run of corporates inclined higher, but gains were mostly small.

Several blocks of $25,000 to $100,000, par value, graced the tape, causing observers to recall the boomlet in low priced rail issues shortly after the turn of this year, when various issues were in the first stages of accumulation in anticipation of greatly expanded traffic.

Total values of $9,589,300, par value, compared with $7,248,550 last Friday. The Associated Press average of 20 rails advanced .3 of a point to 64.7. Changes in other groups were smaller.

Among the more active and higher rails were Baltimore & Ohio conventibles of '60, at 30½, St. Paul 5s at 11⅜ Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s at 30⅝. New York Central 5s at 61¾, St. Louis-San Francisco 4½s at 16¾, Denver & Rio Grande Western at 16, Colorado & Southern 4½s at 23⅛ and Rock Island general 4s at 23½.

United States Governments had difficulty in finding a trend most of the day, although a few longer term Treasuries and some of the recently issued taxables were in fair demand.

Life Insurance Assets Increase In Great Britain

New York, July 7 (AP).—Despite bombings and the war, British life insurance in 1940 showed increased assets, increased premium income and increased payments to policyholders, the Institute of Life Insurance reported today.

Payments to policyholders and beneficiaries in the form of death benefits, payments on maturing policies and surrender values paid out totaled 19 per cent more in 1940 than in the prewar year 1938 and 2 per cent more than in 1939, the institute found in a study of companies representing 60 per cent of the British business.

Total payments for death benefits to the families of policyholders increased 12.4 per cent in 1940 over 1939 and 20 per cent over 1938.

During 1940 total life insurance assets increased 2.9 per cent over 1939. The net interest rate earned on these funds was 3.6 per cent in 1940, compared with 3.8 per cent in 1939 and 4 per cent in 1938.

Gas Firm Cites Costs, Opposes Rate Cuts

By the Associated Press

Representatives of the Hope Natural Gas Co. of West Virginia contended yesterday that increased operating costs removed any justification for a reduction of its wholesale rates to affiliates in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

William B. Cockley, counsel for the company, presented the company's arguments as the Federal Power Commission resumed hearings of complaints against the rates filed by Cleveland and the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission.

Cotton Leads Sharp Rise in Commodities

By the Associated Press

Cotton futures, advancing $1.50 to $1.70 a bale, led most commodity prices sharply upward yesterday.

All cotton positions but July closed above the 15-cent-a-pound level as traders heard reports indicting the farm bloc in Congress would increase its resistance to ceilings on agricultural product values.

Cottonseed oil rose .42 to .48 of a cent a pound in sympathy with cotton, and in Chicago wheat advanced 1⅝ to 2 cents a bushel, while corn was ½ to ⅝ cent a bushel higher.

Wool tops gained ½ to 1 cent a pound, but hides disregarded the trend with a drop of .08 to .12 cent a pound.

Coffee was unchanged to .02 cent a pound lower, cocoa gained .03 to .04 cent a pound, and silk was ½ cent higher to 1 cent lower per pound.

Rubber prices were unchanged to .10 cent a pound lower.

The Associated Press index of 35 wholesale staples moved upward to 88.99 per cent of the 1926 average from 88.71 per cent Saturday.

Wheat Also Strong

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—Lacking large-scale selling pressure that normally accompanies expansion of harvest, the wheat market today responded to strength of other commodities with net gains of more than 2 cents a bushel at times.

Although terminal markets in the Southwest received the largest volume of wheat since the new crop movement got under way, little of it was for sale, and, as a result, hedging pressure on the futures pit was limited. Gains of as much as six cents in soybeans, sharp advances of cotton, cottonseed oil and hogs and strength of securities stimulated buying of wheat. Russian claims of checking the German advance and of large Nazi casualties were interpreted bullishly, also.

Despite late profittaking which reduced the gains, wheat closed 1⅛@2 cents higer than Saturday, July 1.04, September 1.06¼@1.06¼; corn ½@⅝ up, July 73¾, September 76⅛; oats ⅜@½ higher; soybeans 4⅛@6 higher; rye ½@1¼ up and lard 28@32 higher.

Soybean advances, which carried July as high as $1.52½, within 4 cents of the four-year peak established June 27, were based largely on announcement that the Surplus Marketing Administration may accept tomorrow offers on an undetermined quantity picked for export presumably to Britain. While the quantity purchased is not expected to be large, trades were encouraged by evidence of export demand.

Corn, oats and rye followed wheat, with the feed grains and lard strengthened by the hog market upturn to a new four-year top.

New Traffic Record For United Air Lines

New York, July 7 (AP).—Revenue passenger miles flown by United Air Lines in June totaled 28,500,000, the largest for any month in history, Harold Crary, vice president in charge of traffic announced today.

The figure was 5 per cent larger than passenger miles flown in August, 1940, the previous record high month. The June total was 13½ per cent above May, and 17½ per cent greater than in June, 1940.

Asset Value Mounts

New York, July 7 (AP).—Lehman Corporation today reported net asset value of $57,634,793 as of June 30, or $28.77 per common share. This compared to $57,003,382, or $27.46, on June 30, 1940.

New York Cotton

New York, July 7 (AP).—Active demand boosted cotton futures $1.50 to $1.70 a bale today with final quotations at the day's best levels.

Mill buying in anticipation of Government contracts, Wall Street and professional purchases stood up under spot house and Southern offerings and price fixing.

Reports of rain in the eastern section of the belt and of boll weevil infestation lent strength to the upward movement.

It was reported the Government awarded contracts calling for 26,000,000 yards of 13-ounce duck, requiring about 40,000 bales of cotton to make.

There was comparatively little hedge selling, reflecting small spot sales in the South, where the volume of old crop cotton offered mills was said to be much smaller than a few weeks ago.

(The Worth Street gray goods market was inactive, one trader commenting that it probably would remain that way for several weeks aside from possible Government business.

No exports Saturday. Season so far, 1,029,476 bales; port receipts, 23,047; port stocks, 3,286,943.

Chicago's Filipino Athletes Triumph In Intercity Meet

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 7.—Chicago teams swept three of the four events in the fifth annual intercity meet of the Filipino Athletic League, Ferdinand Laxamana, director of the Filipino Community Center here, announced today.

A squad of Filipino athletes from Detroit, directed by Pete Kruz, won the softball championship. Washington sent 25 young men into competition under the direction of Francisco Solis, but they were unable to place at the top.

Washington also lost a debate to Chicago on the question: Resolved, that the United States should enter the war now. Washington upheld the affirmative. Plans were being made to hold the 1942 meet in Washington.

Shoreham Picked to Win Airport Swim

Having grown numerically as well as in the matter of experience, the Shoreham swimming team has established itself as a strong favorite to capture the team title in the women's division of the Washington Airport swimming meet next Monday evening.

Though Patsy Palmer still heads the list, the Shoreham team now boasts an improved Betty Roland and such lesser lights as Betty Ott in the medley, Jean Dodder in the breaststroke and Harriet Fisk in the backstroke.

Coach Dudley Gordon, for one, thinks the combination of experience and numerical force will be enough to bring the team title to his outfit.

"Sure, I know there will be plenty of New York stars on hand, but I have a large crew now and don't forget the second, third and fourth places all add up. I think we'll win the team trophy through the runner-up spots," is Gordon's sizeup of the situation.

Tied in third-place bracket were a couple of Pennsylvanians, George Fazio, of Philadelphia, a freshman on the major circuit, and William "Red" Francis, of Hollidaysburg, with 70s.

Only five of the field made old man par holler "uncle." They were the two pace setters, Bassler and Harrison, Snead, Fazio and Francis.

A. L. Favored Over N. L. Stars Today

Travis on Third

Despite the fact that Travis is now playing shortstop for the Nats, he is definitely tabbed as the third baseman of the All-Star team in tribute to his batting average and his ability to handle either the third base or shortstop job.

Dutch Leonard, the third Washington player selected on the team, won his place as a result of the sudden injury suffered by Marius Russo, Yankee southpaw, who was an original selection. Russo strained his side last Sunday and Leonard was hurriedly named as a replacement. He may not figure in the game unless the American League needs a relief pitching job.

Transcending even the result of the All-Star game, or at least a whopping sideshow attraction, is the presence of Joe DiMaggio in the American League line-up. Tomorrow, National League pitching will be attempting a feat at which American League hurlers have failed in the last 48 games during which DiMaggio shattered all big league records for consecutive-game hitting.

Williams in Clean-Up Role

DiMaggio is batting third in the American League line-up, with Ted Williams, of the Red Sox, in the clean-up spot, in deference to his .402 batting average.

From top to bottom, the American League power appears to have a big bulge over the National League, Joe Gordon or Bobby Doerr, will be the lead-off man, according to Baker, who is inclining toward Gordon as his ultimate choice. Batting second will be Travis or Ken Keltner, the third basemen. Baker indicated it would be Travis, the peerless DiMaggio will hit third, and mopping up will be Ted Williams. Jeff Heath, currently hitting .370 is the fifth-place hitter. Joe Cronin, at shortstop, will bat sixth, and Rudy York will hit seventh. Bill Dickey, the catcher, is eighth in the batting order.

The National League has no such power array to offer. It's emphasis is on defense, but American Leaguers concede not even that edge to the National League. Stan Hack, of the Cubs, will play third and lead off for McKechnie, with Linus Frey at second, hitting second. Pete Reiser, Dodger sensation, is hitting third and playing center field.

Eddie Miller Bats 7th

National League power reaches its peak when Johnny Mize, hard-hitting first baseman of the Cardinals, goes to bat in fourth place, and the N. L. presents another home run threat in Mel Ott, of the Giants, batting fifth and playing right field. Bob Elliott, of the Pirates, a newcomer to the All-Star stage, plays left field and hits sixth. Eddie Miller, sensational fielding shortstop of the Braves, is in the lineup at seventh place despite his average of below .200. Mickey Owen, of the Dodgers, will catch and bat eighth, having recovered from his injury of last week.

Only in the pitching does the National League appear to have the edge, and that, despite Feller. At the end of Wyatt's three-inning turn, McKechnie can toss Bucky Walters or Paul Derringer, both well rested for tomorrow's effort at the American Leaguers, and he will also have Carl Hubbell and Passeau in reserve.

Kavakos, Senate Tens to Play USO Benefit July 16

The District of Columbia Softball Association, through President Charley Reynolds and Commissioner Winfree E. Johnson, last night accomplished what Abe Rosenfield, of Senate Beer, and "Big Bill" Kavakos, manager of Kavakos Grill, have been trying to do all year and failed—arrange a softball game between these two leading softball teams.

The game, Johnson and Reynolds jointly announced last night, will be played at Griffith Stadium next Wednesday, July 16. Proceeds will be divided equally between the United Service Organization and the D. C. Softball Association, the latter fund to be used to send the District championship softball ten to the national championship at Detroit in September. Clark C. Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club, is donating the stadium without charge and will deduct only actual lighting cost and expenses from the proceeds.

Jeanne Cline Wins Western Medal

St. Charles, Ill., July 7 (AP).—Jeanne Cline, 17-year-old Bloomington, Ill., shotmaker, won medal honors today in the Women's Western Junior Golf Tournament, posting an 81 over the arduous St. Charles Country Club layout.

Miss Cline was one of nine girls to break 90 on the course, scene of the National Professional Golfers Association trials three years ago.

Johnny Colan K.O.'s Trotter in Chicago

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—Johnny Colan, 162, New York, knocked out Johnny Trotter, 170, Chicago, tonight in the ninth round of their scheduled ten-round main event at Marigold Gardens.

The victory was Colan's thirty-fourth in 37 professional starts and his twenty-fourth knockout. Leonard Bennett, 147, Detroit, knocked out Chuck Vickers, 147, Indianapolis, in the first round. Lee Oma, Detroit heavyweight, knocked out Lou Campbell, Chicago, in the second round. Campbell was a last-minute substitute for Frank Greene, another Chicagoan.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"Elwyn's a darling, mama—we had our first quarrel this morning and he's no good at it!"

ADVERTISEMENT
Listen!
with Glynn

The All-Star baseball game in Detroit—in which the Senators are to be triply represented by Pitchers Sid Hudson and Dutch Leonard and Shortstop Cecil Travis—can be heard over WJSV today from 1:15 to 3:45 p. m. E. S. T.

Three of the Columbia network's most competent baseball reporters are to be on hand to describe the events. James Stevenson is to do the pre-game "color" and the between-inning summaries. Mel Allen, who was the man behind the microphone for the Yankee-Giant games last year, and Furnace Laux, who has been covering the St. Louis games for years, will alternate in reporting the play-by-play of the actual contest.

Arch McDonald is going to be present, too, and it's probable, in view of Washington's large representation of the American League All-Star team, that you'll be hearing a few words from him.

This is the ninth consecutive year that the star players of the American League are batting the top notchers of the rival National League. Usually the proceeds have gone into a charity fund connected with baseball, but this year, in keeping with the times, the returns are to be given over to the United Service Organizations, to be used for the entertainment of the Nation's soldiers.

The National League won last year, 4 to 0. But then, the Americans didn't have such a triple threat as is represented this year by Hudson, Leonard and Travis, of you know what city.

TODAY in Washington

Contract Bridge

Today's hand occurred at a duplicate tournament. The bidding, in a rather roundabout fashion, ended at six clubs, redoubled. Why South did not content himself with five clubs, redoubled, is explained by the English expert by the fact that South was pressing to make up ground lost on earlier hands.

Opening lead: Q ◇.

Declarer won his contract, playing for every opportunity it offered. Refusing a finesse, he started out to establish a suit through ruffing, but ended up with a cross-ruff.

West opened the queen of diamonds; the king won in dummy and a heart went to declarer's ace. A low spade drew a small card from West, dummy's king winning the trick. The heart king was cashed and a low heart trumped. A spade lead lost to West's queen and a diamond return picked up dummy's ace. Another heart was trumped and a third round of spades was ruffed with the club nine. East was left with a spade and three clubs; and upon the lead of the deuce of diamonds from North, East could not prevent declarer from taking the rest of the tricks. If he discarded his jack of spades declarer would trump with the club six, ruff his spade with dummy's queen of clubs and cash the ace and king. If East attempted to prevent the six from making by trumping the diamond South would overtrump, ruff his last spade with the club ten and win the last two tricks with club honors. Either way South would win twelve tricks, losing only the spade ace.

"If the heart finesse is taken the play is simple," writes the reporter. "The finesse is rather better than an even chance but the declarer wanted better odds."

Damage Reported Slight as Waters Rise in Virginia

Roanoke, Va., July 7 (AP).—While all streams, large and small, in the western half of Virginia show decided affects of the continued rainfall, high water of damaging volume is reported from few places, and exceptionally heavy local rains seem responsible for the only considerable damage.

In Bland County Saturday night damage estimated at $50,000 or more was done along a short section of Hunting Camp Creek in the vicinity of Bastian and Rocky Gap. The Virginia Hardwood Lumber Company, whose main plant and office as at Bastian, is said ot have been the chief sufferer, although farmers lost stock and crops. A CCC camp was isolated when a bridge connecting with the highway to that section was washed out. Damage also is reported to Norfolk and Western branch line tracks in that area.

Idle Aid Board Will Test 1,200 Job Applicants

Richmond, Va., July 7 (AP).—The merit system council of the Virginia Unemployment Compensation Commission will give examinations July 26 in high schools in 10 cities.

Harris Hart, council supervisor, said nearly 1,200 applications had been received from persons wishing to take the tests.

The examinations will be conducted in Norfolk, Lynchburg, Roanoke, Richmond, Bristol, Pulaski, Appalachia, Harrisonburg, Charlottesville, and Alexandria. They will be given to applicants who applied before the deadline June 21 and met the minimum requirements for the following classifications which carry the monthly salaries indicated: field supervisors, $200 to $260; manager, class 1, $260; manager class 2, $175 to $200; supervising interviewer, $150 to $175, and interviewer, $125, to $145.

Too Busy for Politics, Asserts Gov. Price

Richmond, Va., July 7 (AP).—Governor Price, asked today about reports that he was supporting Colgate W. Darden, jr., for governor, said "I have no political statement to make."

Mr. Price said he was "busy being Governor of Virginia and not in selecting the next governor."

The Loudoun Times-Mirror, published by former Governor Westmoreland Davis, carried an editorial recently listing Governor Price as "Early in support of Darden's candidacy."

Furniture Dealers Given Permission To Raise Prices

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—James F. Bogardus, of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, announced today that OPACS had given all furniture dealers permission to raise prices not more than 5 per cent above April levels without prior consultation with Government officials. He spoke at a luncheon of furniture men here for the opening of the big summer markets. Bogardus said:

"I will not be at all surprised to see a priority put on mahogany in the near future, removing all of it from the furniture industry, but there is an adequate supply of domestic hardwoods to replace mahogany."

He said it was "directly contrary to national policy" to urge consumers to buy merchandise immediately because of threatened price increases.

Ferguson Nominated To New FTC Term

President Roosevelt nominated Garland S. Ferugson, jr., yesterday for another term as a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

Ferguson, formerly of Waynesville, and Greensboro, N. C., was named for his third 7-year term.

19,205-Ton Tanker Ready 2 Months Early

Chester, Pa., July 7 (AP).—Launching of the 19,205-ton Atlantic Refining Co. tanker W. C. Yeager today marks a record construction job prompted by the war emergency shortage of tank ships.

Sliding down the ways less than four months after laying of the keel, and two months ahead of schedule, at the Sun Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., the vessel is expected to go into service between Philadelphia and Texas ports within a month to help relieve a threatened shortage of oil in the East.

Sun Shipbuilding plans to launch 70 new tankers this year.

Norwegian Pilots Fighting, Says Prince

London, July 7 (AP).—Crown Prince Olaf of Norway told a luncheon gathering today more than 90 per cent of the Norwegian air force pilots had escaped their country and were fighting with the British.
